Frankfurter Chided By Two Colleagues For 'Personal Views'

Renegotiation Backers to Tell Of Huge Profits

Rockwell, Holding U. S. Post, Special Target at Capitol

By Mary Spargo

Within the next two days Senate and House backers of the renegotiation law, under which the Government can revise downward profits of war contractors, will lay bare enormous profits on the part of various contractors, including one who holds an official position as director of production of the Maritime Commission.

Attempts on the part of the Senate Finance Committee virtually to nullify the renegotiation act in the new tax bill, which will be the first order of business when the Congress returns, have drawn the wrath of the chairmen of both Senate and House Naval Affairs Committees who are prepared to cite what they term "outrageous examples" of wartime profiteering.

Among Chief Targets

One of the chief targets of their exposes, which are expected to follow in quick succession, is Col. Willard F. Rockwell, chairman of the board of the Timken-Detroit Axle Co. and director of production of the Maritime Commission.

Rockwell will be singled out for especial attention because on the same day that Maritime Commission Chairman Emory S. Land appeared before the Senate Finance Committee to defend the Renegotiation Act, Rockwell, his subordinate, appeared in his capacity as chairman of the Timken-Detroit Axle board to hotly condemn it.

Rockwell condemned it so hotly, in fact, that Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri remarked later:

"Colonel Rockwell wept all over the place and beat his breast, claiming he was robbed."

What the Books Show

Information in the possession of Senator Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts and Representative Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia, chairmen respectively of Senate and House Naval Affairs Committees, indicate that the robbing of Rockwil was about as follows:

In 1941 his salary with the Timken-Detroit Axle Co. was $14,000.

In 1942 his salary was $50,583.

In 1942, in addition to his salary, Rockwell received 3900 shares of

Army Air Forces' Prowess Praised

"The Army Air Forces which the Axis calculated would be the weak link in our chain of battle, has instead turned out to be our greatest strength and has so far supplied our margin of victory," says Gen. H. H. Arnold, air forces commanding general, in his annual report.

The second article on striking portions of the general's summary appears on Page 2 of today's Post.

Black and Murphy Cite Morals, Ethics Voiced in Opinions

By William T. Peacock
Associated Press Staff Writer

A judicial rift apparently has developed between Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter on the one hand and Justices Black and Murphy over the whole approach of the court toward questions of law and economics.

Taking issue with doctrines advanced by Frankfurter in connection with latest decisions of the court, Black and Murphy asserted that he proposed in one case to interpret the patent laws on the basis of his "personal views on 'morals' and 'ethics.'" In another, involving utility rate making, they said he made "what is patently a wholly gratuitous assertion as to constitutional law."

"We feel compelled," they said with reference to the latter case, "to say that we do not understand that Congress has voluntarily acquiesced in a constitutional principle of government that courts, rather than legislative bodies, possess final authority over regulation of economic affairs."

The 'Liberal' Team

The split attracted more attention than the usual differences of opinion among justices, both because of the vigor of the language used by Black and Murphy and the men involved.

All three were appointed to the bench by President Roosevelt and New Dealers confidently counted on them working together as a "liberal" team.

Before coming to the bench, Frankfurter frequently was called on by the President for advice, and reportedly has continued on occasion to act in that capacity.

Frankfurter was on the losing side in both cases in which his views came under attack from Black and Murphy.

In one, the court ruled 5 to 4, Monday, in favor of the Mercoid Corp., which was defendant in a suit brought by the Mid-Continent Corp. and Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co. for alleged contributory infringement of patents for a domestic heating system.

(Contributory infringement under patent laws is when one person or firm aids or contributes to another's infringement of patent rights.)

How Court Decided

Justice Douglas wrote the majority decision, with Chief Justice Stone and Justices Black, Murphy and Rutledge concurring. In the minority were Justices Roberts, Frankfurter, Reed and Jackson.

In the other, the court held 5 to 3 that the Federal Power Commission's rate orders are not subject to Federal court interference unless their "total effect" is "unjust and unreasonable." Justices Jackson, Frankfurter and Reed dissented, and Justice Rutledge did not participate.

In both cases, Black wrote concurring opinions which were devoted solely to taking issue with the reasons Frankfurter gave for dissenting. Murphy attached his

Strike Peril Was Real, Say Union Heads

Challenge Green Assertion There Was Never Any Strike Possibility

Copyright, 1944, New York Tribune, Inc.

Leaders of two railroad brotherhoods challenged yesterday the statement made by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, that "there never was the faintest possibility of an actual walkout on the Nation's railroads."

Green's assertion was made in a formal defense of labor against the antistrike statement made last Friday by a high official who has since been identified in some reports as Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff.

Leaders of the railroad workers' unions which are affiliated with the AFL were reluctant to comment, lest they find themselves in conflict with Green.

But David B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, and Harry F. Fraser, president of the Order of Railroad Conductors, which are not in the AFL, state unequivocally that only the seizure of the railroads averted a Nationwide strike at 6 a. m. last Thursday.

"If they had allowed the case to remain in the National Mediation Board," the two leaders said, "in all probability there would have been no strike. But under the circumstances, with the case handled as it was, there was no opportunity to make a settlement and the only thing that avoided a strike was the taking over of the railroads."

Both union officials pointed out that, though they wished it were possible for all labor organizations to settle their claims without resort to strike in wartime, their unions were not parties to the no-strike pledge of the AFL and the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Legislators Study Broader Strike Penalty

By Robert C. Albright

Legislation extending criminal penalties of the Connally-Smith Act to strikes in privately operated war industries yesterday was quietly discussed at the Capitol and probably will be introduced shortly after Congress reconvenes.

This was learned yesterday, as a flurry of congressional statements backed the view attributed to Gen. George C. Marshall—that the steel strike and Government seizure of the railroads had delayed victory by bolstering Axis morale.

One Senator, formerly identified with war labor legislation, already has sounded out high Administration officials on possible White House backing for such a move, and expects to confer with returning legislative leaders next week.

In another quarter, it was learned that War Mobilization officials have studied possible revision of the Connally Act to meet interruptions in private war plants, but have reached no final conclusions.

The antistrike law, originally designed to head off the coal strike, invokes criminal penalties only

Traffic Court Unimpressed by 'Picayune' Plea

The "picayune" problem propounded by President Roosevelt reached Traffic Court yesterday when Frederick F. Essenschied of 3373 Stuyvesant st. nw. was charged with speeding.

"For this officer to pace me and then hand me a ticket was positively picayune," he told Judge Nathan Margold.

The not-so-picayune fine of $15 was imposed. Essenschied paid it.

Destroyer Leary Also Lost

USS Turner Revealed as Ship Destroyed by Explosion in N. Y.

The Navy last night identified the destroyer sunk by an explosion near Sandy Hook as the 1700-ton USS Turner, and said another destroyer, torpedoed in the North Atlantic was the 1090-ton Leary.

Loss of the ships was announced by the Navy Monday, but it withheld their names. The Turner, commissioned only last April, blew up in lower New Yorw Bay with such violence that her men and guns were hurled into the sea.

Little detail was given on the loss of the 34-year-old Leary except that she sank in the North Atlantic after she was torpedoed Christmas Eve.

Commanding officers of both vessels are listed as missing. They are Comdr. Henry S. Wygant, jr., 37 (of the Turner), whose father, Col. Henry Wygant, USA, retired, and mother live at 3901 Connecticut ave. nw, here, and Comdr. James E. Kyes, 37, of South Seattle (of the Leary).

Coast Guard cutters rescued 152 enlisted men and two officers, the Navy said, after the terrific blast split the Turner in two. Most of the rescued had injuries.

No figures were given by the Navy of the number of casualties in the loss of the two vessels, each of which carried more than 160 men.

"Notifications have been sent to the next of kin of all casualties," the Navy said.

She was christened by Mrs. Louis E. Denfield of Washington,

Turin Railway Yards Blasted By Fortresses

Hundred Direct Hits Are Scored; Factory Wrecked

By Richard G. Massock

Algiers, Jan. 4 (AP).—German supply traffic through the railway bottleneck at Turin in northern Italy was disrupted, and a ball and roller bearing works at nearby Villar Perosa shattered by a heavy and accurate onslaught of United States Flying Fortresses yesterday, photographs showed today.

A hundred direct hits were scored in the heart of the Turin yards, blocking at least temporarily all through lines from France and Milan that converge at Turin to form the principal west coast route to Genoa and Rome.

Simultaneously, two other waves of Fortresses struck in clear, cold weather at the bearing works at Villar Perosa, 23 miles southwest of Turin, and turned it into a shambles.

The huge main building of the plant, which produces 8 per cent of the Nazis' bearings, was blasted by direct hits and near misses, probably knocking the factory out of the war for a long period.

Twice before American bombers attacked the Villar Perosa works, but each time heavy clouds impaired the results. Yesterday the bombing was pin-pointed.

While the weather favored heavy bomber activity for the first time in nearly a week, the opposing land armies in Italy remained stalled in heavy snow in the mountains and in mud near both coasts.

American patrols that probed Nazi defenses around the destroyed village of San Vittore on the main inland highway to Rome stirred up a violent reaction before withdrawing, as did similar patrols at other points on the Fifth Army front.

Banja Luka Falling Under Tito's Attack

Capture of City, Heart of Germans' Defense, Expected

London, Jan. 4 (AP).—Fall of Banja Luka, headquarters of the German second tank army in Yugoslavia, in a strong blow at the heart of the whole Nazi defense system on the Adriatic coast, was expected momentarily tonight as Partisan warriors of Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) reported fresh successes in the battle for the town.

Tito's broadcast declared his troops had captured both the city hall and prison, and driven the Germans into the northwest district of Banja Luka.

Bitter street fighting still is in progress, the bulletin added, with Yugoslav guns denying the Banja Luka airfield to the Germans. The Yugoslavs intercepted a telegram from the German garrison urgently asking for help, the communique continued.

A Yugoslav government statement in Cairo said officers of the royal Yugoslav army stationed in the Middle East had begun joining Tito to make a common front against the Germans, with 17 officers already signed up.

An Italian "pocket division," composed mainly of the old Venezia Divisin regrouped and renamed the Garibaldi Division, was said to have joined the battle in Yugoslavia, fighting its way inland from the Adriatic.

A Cairo broadcast added that Greek guerillas had fought a bloody action with 7000 Nazi troops in the Epirus region of Greece, killing 600.

(Allied officers, presumably American and British, are leading many of Tito's divisions, said a Budapest dispatch to Stockholm, and it is rumored in Belgrade that the Allies soon may invade the Dalmatian coast.)

Survey Facts Disclosed

War Inroad in Home Care Cited As Main Child-Problem Factor

Lack of parental supervision after school hours was discovered as the outstanding fundamental wartime condition affecting child behavior in a recent study of 50,000 pupils based on reports of 1500 teachers of District elementary schools, Robert L. Haycock, District Superintendent of Schools, disclosed last night.

At a meeting of the Advisory Committee on Wartime and Postwar Problems of the Child at Franklin School, Haycock explained that the survey was conducted to ascertain the extent and nature of the wartime behavior problems of boys and girls from 6 to 12 years of age and to determine how the emotional instability of pupils is manifesting itself.

The superintendent reported that the teachers listed these major causes of child delinquency in Washington in addition to lack of parental supervision after school hours: Broken homes; insufficient effort of the home; too much home freedom; overcrowded living conditions and poor housing; inadequate leisure time facilities; lack of normal relationship between child and parents; undesirable movies and radio programs; emotional instability; and bad community environment.

Investigation into changes in the home during the wartime period revealed that in approximately 20 per cent of the homes for white pupils, both parents are at work and in colored schools approximately one-third of the pupils have both parents at work during the day.

"Thus supervision of the children by the home has had an unfortunate breakdown so that many children have the guidance of their parents only in the evening after they return from work," he pointed out. "Teachers also discovered that nearly 3000 pupils are actually living with persons other than their parents. More than 6400 pupils are living in broken homes caused by death, desertion, separation or divorce."

Haycock said that teachers recommended more guidance of parents and more adequate religious instruction in church or Sunday school supplemented by cooperation of all community agencies with the schools to solve the problem.

Russians Kill 4000 Nazis; Take Belaya Tserkov; Foe Facing Trap

By James M. Long

London (Wednesday), Jan. 5 (AP).—The Russians smashed a weak German counterattack near the 1939 Polish border and killed 4000 more Germans yesterday, while to the southeast another force captured the stubbornly defended strong point and railway station of Belaya Tserkov and 40 other Ukrainian towns.

The Russians, who have killed 9000 Germans in the border area in two days, were reported by Moscow to have advance guards already operating across the former frontier.

The Moscow midnight communique told of a German infantry counterattack with two battalions—perhaps 1500 men. This force "succeeded in breaking through the position of Soviet troops," it said, but "our units encircled the enemy formations and wiped out the Hitlerites. More than 400 prisoners were taken."

The communique made no specific reference to crossing the old Polish border, but this was not surprising, since the Russians were taking the attitude that this section of the western Ukraine, which they occupied as a buffer in 1939, was part of their own territory.

More Germans Killed

Another 1100 Germans were killed on the White Russian battlefront around Nevel, where a resurgent Soviet drive to the north captured 100 populated places and cleared the 40-mile Nevel-Velikie Luki rail line of Germans. Pleshkovo, 20 miles northeast of Nevel and the rail station of Izocha, 10 miles north of Nevel, were captured in the push.

With the fall of the German fortress of Belaya Tserkov—announced by Premier Joseph Stalin—more than a half million Germans in the Dnieper bend faced the fate of the German army of Stalingrad unless Field Marshal Gen. Fritz von Mannstein orders a mass retreat to Bessarabia.

For in addition to wresting back Belaya Tserkov in a four-day struggle, the Russians also advanced to capture the district centers of Stavishche, 28 miles south of the fallen bastion, and Pliskov, 38 miles northeast of Vinnitsa.

Great Southward Bulge

This great southward bulge, biting into German defenses protecting Dnieper bend forces, was nearing the vulnerable throat through which all supplies to these troops must pass—Zhmerinka on the Odessa-Lwow railway.

Stalin, in his order of the day, singled out among other Russian units the independent Czechoslovaks of the Suvorov Brigade for

Ten or More Zeros Downed In Marshalls

Pearl Harbor, Jan. 4 (INS).—Giant Army Liberator bombers were revealed today to have downed at least 10 and probably 17 Jap planes out of a force of 60 Zeros that attempted to intercept a new air blow at the Marshalls Sunday.

Chalking up their greatest bag of Japanese planes since the battle of the Marshalls began two months ago, the four-motored bombers of the U. S. Seventh Air Force suffered only "slight" damage in beating off the Nipponese air fleets at Wotje and Taroa.

A communique said eight Zeros were shot down and five others probably were downed out of a force of 30 that intercepted the Liberators over Wotje. Two Zeros were destroyed and another two probably were shot down when an equally-large Jap squadron attempted to disrupt the companion assault on Taroa, said the communique.

The same day, twin-motored Mitchell bombers pounded the Jaluti atoll, but the communique did not indicate if any Jap planes rose to intercept the raiders.

That night, the Japs retaliated with what was believed to be the heaviest Nipponese air attack against the Gilberts since their occupation by Marines two months ago. Ten Jap bombers attacked installations at Abemama, but only slight damage resulted and two Americans were killed, said the communique.

Marines Stop New Assault On Gloucester

By C. Yates McDaniel

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea (Wednesday), Jan. 5 (AP).—United States Marines repulsed a sharp enemy counterattack at Cape Gloucester, New Britain, killing at least 200 Japanese and raising to 1500 dead the price the Nipponese have paid in opposing the Leathernecks since the invasion landing there December 26.

A communique today said the Japanese attack early Monday morning was made against the Marine lines near Silimati Point on Borgen Bay, east of the cape.

Brig. Gen. Clarence Martin's troops of the Thirty-second Army Division have driven a wedge approximately 3 miles wide and 3 miles deep into the enemy's coastal supply area at Saidor, on the north coast of New Guinea, where the Americans landed Sunday. So far, the invaders have encountered only light enemy opposition.

Australians pushing northward along the coast of the Huon Peninsula, New Guinea, have gained 15 miles in three days and by nightfall Monday had reached a point approximately 80 airline miles southwest of the American position at

Titanic Array of Heavy Bombers Hits Kiel; France Raided All Day

London, Jan. 4 (AP).—American heavy bombers in titanic strength lashed northwest Germany today, with Kiel as the reported main target, while American and British medium bombers maintained a dawn-to-dusk shuttle service of explosives on the Pas de Calais area and the French invasion coast.

Together with the fighter escorts, the two great missions employed probably the greatest number of war planes ever in action by daylight—more than 2750 dropping more than 3000 tons of bombs on the enemy. A total of 18 bombers and two fighters failed to return from the northwest Germany assault and four bombers and one fighter was missing up to noon in the Channel blows. All the bombing was in daylight.

These and other forays were estimated to have employed a total of 3000 planes against the continent.

There were about 1500 planes in the assault on northwest Germany, including Flying Fortresses, Liberators and American and British fighters.

Across 100 Miles of Sky

They stretched across more than 100 miles of sky, darkening the heavens, and one flier said their methodical deposits of bombs on the target reminded him of a relay of dump trucks.

London announcements did not identify the exact locations, but both Swedish and German reports named Kiel, big naval base and submarine and shipyard center. DNB, German news agency, said the attack was made through heavy cumulus clouds from altitudes of 20,000 to 27,000 feet and admitted "great numbers of incendiaries and phosphorous bombs were dropped and caused great damage."

In week retaliation, London had a 32-minute night air raid and bombs were reported to have fallen in one London district and in one of the home counties.

The medium bombers and fighters raided the French coast all day, with the Pas de Calais department as the only district named. Two hundred American Marauders started the procession at dawn, followed regularly by British Typhoons and Hurricanes and then by Bostons, Mitchells, and Mosquitos. The Marauders then made a second trip. It was their sixth consecutive day of vigorous attacks without loss.

Heavy Attack on Coast

In the morning alone, 450 British and American medium bombers, including 200 Marauders, with 300 fighters, struck the French coast and in the afternoon 500 more bombers and fighters crossed the Channel to continue the assault.

The Army did not specify the heavy bomber target, but said the escorting fighters made one of their deepest penetrations into northwest Germany.

They met little fighter opposition.

"It made me think of Roosevelt's prophecy of blackening the skies over Germany with bombers—God knows they were black today" commented Lieut. Earl Mazo, former newspaper man of Charleston, S. C.

"Our escort boys just thumbed their noses at the Germans. Every time a Jerry stuck his nose up through the clouds they'd pounce down, knock him right down and go back to their places."

The force appeared to be at least equal in size to each of the

Rep. Knutson Demands Divorce Of Revenue Bureau, Treasury

Representative Knutson (Republican) of Minnesota of the House Ways and Means Committee announced yesterday he would seek legislation to divorce the Internal Revenue Bureau from the Treasury Department.

"Separation of the two agencies would take politics out of the operation and enforcement of our tax laws, prevent the Administration from using the threat of unwarranted investigation of income tax returns as an instrument of punishment or duress, and permit the bureau to be of much greater service to Congress in advising on the mechanism of collecting taxes," Knutson contended.

Echoes of the continual battle between tax legislators and the Treasury Department rang through Knutson's statement.

"So far as the Treasury is concerned," the Minnesota Representative declared, "a great many members of Congress, regardless of party affiliation, are at the end of their patience in reference to the attempt of Secretary Morgenthau to usurp the constitutional control of the legislative branch over tax policy.

Diplomatic Tension

Hull Silent on Action by U. S. In Russian-Polish Situation

By the Associated Press

The possibility that the United States may make an effort to bring Poland and Russia together diplomatically was left open yesterday by Secretary of State Hull.

Asked at his press conference about the forthcoming visit here of Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, premier of the Polish government in exile, Hull said the purpose of the visit could be inferred from the situation in Europe.

Hull said this Government turns its attention to all matters rising in connection with the Allied situation when it is practical and feasible. We do it in a friendly spirit, he added.

Diplomatic observers here are watching the Russian army's westward drive with fingers crossed in the hope that no border incidents will arise to snap the tension between Russia and the Polish government in exile.

The question of whether the smoldering feeling between Poland and Russia, which do not have diplomatic relations, will flare up depends on actions taken by the Polish underground, the conduct of the Red army and the attitude of the Polish government in London.

Jan Kwapinski, Polish deputy premier who attended the United Nations relief conference in Atlantic City, said in Chicago three weeks ago that instructions had been issued to the Polish underground and that they had been submitted to the British and American high commands.

He did not indicate whether the chiefs of staff approved, however.

Red Thrust Shakes Bulgarian Regime

Hungarians Renew Peace Cries; Polish Cabinet Ponders 'Crisis'

London, Jan. 4 (AP).—The Red Army advance into old Poland shook the Bulgarian government of Premier Dobri Bojilov today, while new peace cries were sounded by the Hungarians and the Poles described the Russian thrust as the "most serious political and moral crisis of the whole war."

The Polish cabinet met today and announced afterward that the government's attitude on the situation "will be made public in the near future."

(Although Sofia still remained cut off from the rest of the world, the Nazi-controlled Bulgarian home radio said Allied planes had flown over the capital again Tuesday and dropped bombs "on several places.")

There was no confirmation in official London circles of reports of a pro-Allied coup d'etat overthrowing the Bulgarian government, and the Germans branded the story as false.

Important changes in policy have been anticipated from Bulgaria, where the peasants as well as many of the rank and file in the Army are pro-Russian.

Reports reaching London indicate that Prince Kyril was maneuvering to get himself appointed sole regent with royal powers. He then would form a new government of "national concentration" to include the leader of the democratic opposition who is said to have organized the coup d'etat.

Other reports said many Hungarian leaders were considering unconditional surrender of Hungary to the United Nations.

Advices from Istanbul said popular revolts might be attempted in both Hungary and Rumania if the Russian drive southwestward continued.

New Secret Sight Aids RAF In Berlin 'Pattern' Bombing

By John H. Colburn

Stockholm, Jan. 4 (AP).—The accuracy of a secret new navigation device which permits the RAF to bomb targets with precision regardless of weather conditions has amazed high German military officials who have observed how it was used in the systematic pattern destruction of Berlin, it was learned today.

A source close to German official circles said the baffled Germans were canught flat-footed by the Allied secret weapon which permits pattern and precision bombing almost on the scale of the United States Air Force in clear daylight.

(The United States Eighth Air Force announced December 28 the development of secret scientific navigation devices which permit American bombers to bomb accurately from as high as 25,000 feet targets obscured by either clouds or fog. The announcement said the new methods had been used successfully in missions involving a total of 8000 bombers and fighters.)

Eyewitnesses said there is remarkably little wastage of bombs. There is only a small amount—perhaps not more than 200 yards—of overlapping as the attackers move from neighborhood to neighborhood.

Scientist Explains

An anonymous Swedish scientist said in the newspaper Dagens Nyheter that the RAF was apparently using a radar-radio location navigation device transmitting infrared rays which pierce fog and cloud. When the rays are reflected from the earth, they are recorded in a cathode ray tube forming a pattern which the navigator can read like a map.

This scientist credited the development to a Russian-American scientist named Zworykin, who was said to live in Camden, N. J.

A traveler who went through the London blitz said the Berlin air-raid precaution organization failed badly in the recent RAF attacks.

"London's ARP organization was better prepared in 1939 than Berlin's after four years of war," this person added. "Nor is there the same spirit for fighting fires that I saw in London. Of course, there is no comparison between the bombing of London and Berlin. Fires rage days at a time with a fierceness hard to describe and the fire-fighting forces are inadequate to cope with them."

(The scientist mentioned is Dr. Vladimir K. Zworykin, long connected with cathode ray tube research for television and other electronic purposes. This tube has the ability of making radio signals visible.

(Doctor Zworykin, who has been associated with the Radio Corporation of America at Camden, and Princeton, N. J., since 1930, as associate research director, also is credited with development of the electron microscope in which the cathode ray tube is used. He came to this country from Russia when a young man in 1919.)

Hearing to Bare Enormous Profits

stock in Timken-Detroit, valued in the market at $114,075.

In addition, the company paid toward the purchase of retirement annuity for him the sum of $48,012 in 1942, as against the $21,819 it paid in 1941 for the same purpose. At the age of 65 it is planned he can retire on $502 per month.

All efforts to secure any information regarding Rockwell's salary with the Maritime Commission or any statement regarding his appearance before the Senate Finance Committee failed yesterday. Officials stated that since the Maritime Commission had no dollar-a-year men it could be presumed that Rockwell received a salary, but that information could be obtained, by special order, only from Admiral Land, Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery, or Rockwell himself.

Claims Pressure Applied

Rockwell claimed before the Senate Finance Committee that Undersecretary of War Patterson was attempting to force his company to comply with an unfair renegotiation by withholding a new contract.

In refutation, Patterson and Maj. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, director of materiel, Army Services Forces, appeared to tell the committee that what had actually happened was that Rockwell was demanding such excessive profits for his company, and for a subsidiary company, the Standard Steel Spring Co., of which Rockwell is also chairman of the board, that the War Department couldn't grant the contract.

"The Army," said Patterson, "has pressing need of the services of that company and we are anxious to make a contract with it. But the terms demanded by Timken are utterly unreasonable. They are terms that the Government should never yield to."

$5,070,000 Net Profit

Patterson further told the committee:

"In the light of Mr. Rockwell's statement that he has been compelled to reduce his company's dividends because of renegotiation I think I should also call your attention to the total net profit of the company for the fiscal year 1942 after renegotiation and after taxes. The profit is $5,070,000—more than 2½ times the average of the normal years after taxes and 32.4 per cent of the total book net worth of the company."

Clay told the committee that Timken received 33.4 per cent profit on its net renegotiable sales during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1942, nad after renegotiation was left with a profit of 11 per cent.

He said that Timken, with the same chairman of each board, proposed a fee for itself of $4,368,000 for providing supervision and direction of manufacture of axles by a subcontractor.

Under the amendments to the current tax bill proposed by Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia, over which a violent legislative storm is brewing, Timken-Detroit Axle Co. and its subcontractors would be exempted from renegotiation as manufacturers of standard articles.

Reds Drive Into Old Poland

GERMANS FAIL TO STOP PUSH—Russian troops yesterday were driving into prewar Poland along the Kiev-Warsaw railroad after capturing Olevsk. To the south Novograd Volynski and Dzerzhinsk were in Red hands and advances in those areas were continuing. Shaded area is that held by Germans in Russia special credit in the capture of Belaya Tserkov.

The Russians captured Kiev November 6 and quickly pushed a score of miles southward but stalled there before powerful German defenses, and subsequently continued their drive almost due west from Kiev. This left Belaya Tserkov, a town normally of 50,000, whose name means "White Church," as the hinge position guarding the German left flank in the Dnieper Bend.

North and west, in the zone of the Russians' deepest westward penetration, Nazi troops under Gen. Fritz von Mannstein were reported retreating in disorder through the swamps and bogs of the lower Pripet marshes. Indicating the extent of the German defeat, dispatches direct from the front to the Moscow Soviet army newspaper Red Star said that big guns, trucks and other trophies of war were abandoned in quantity to the victorious Soviet forces.

There was nothing to indicate the Germans were able to make a stand anywhere.

There was little fresh news about what was happening at the Dnieper River manganese city of Nikopol and other places deep in the Dnieper Bend, but it was clear the Soviet drive was being pushed so swiftly that the entire German position was threatened. The Russians already were some 280 miles west of some German groups in the Dnieper Bend, and 300 miles west of those in the sealed-off eastern Crimea.

Soviet Union Pays $384,000 For New Hymn

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, Jan. 4 (AP).—The new hymn of the Soviet Union has become almost overnight one of the highest priced piece of music in the world.

The Council of People's Commissars has come forward with awards which total almost 2,000,000 rubles (approximately $384,000) to those who participated in a competition to get a new song to replace the outmoded "Internationale."

Sergei Mikhalkov and E. L. Registan, who wrote the words, have been given 100,000 rubles (almost $20,000) each, while the composer of the music, A. V. Alexandrov, received a like amount.

All the poets and musicians who took part in the competition—and there were about 165 musicians and 40 poets—automatically received 4,000 rubles each.

Dmitry Shostakovich, well-known Russian composer, was one of those who lent a hand in some of the orchestrations. It was not stated what he received.

Numerous arrangements of the hymn have been turned out. Some are for large symphonic orchestras, some for small groups, some for small voice choruses and some for large. All of the arrangers received 8000 rubles each.

The people of the Soviet Union speak many tongues, and it was a considerable undertaking to turn out the new national anthem so that it would rhyme and balance in each one. The translators who did this also were compensated.

The official English version has not yet been announced.

The Alexandrovs had a lot to do with the new hymn. A. V. Alexandrov was the composer; A. N. Alexandrov, B. A. Alexandrov and V. A. Alexandrov participated in the arrangements.

that the people in eastern Poland may fight occupying Russian troops was looked upon as outdated by a Polish Embassy spokesman yesterday.

He said subsequent developments at Teheran and London have somewhat changed the situation, but that no instructions had yet been received from London as to the position of the government when the Red army reached the prewar border.

two recent record-breaking operations which Lieut. Gen. Ira Eaker said numbered about 1500 bombers and fighters.

RAF fighters supporting the American heavy bombers over Germany shot down five enemy aircraft and lost one. The Americans' first announcement did not disclose the bag of enemy fighters by the American fighters and bombers.

Returning airmen said great fires were started in the target area, indicating some of the bombs may have been the 500-pound incendiaries which General Arnold has disclosed were being used against Germany.

The flak was reported heavy and a dispatch received from Stockholm said one big American bomber, sieved with shell bursts, crash-landed in Sweden this afternoon and that the 10 crewmen, including one wounded, were interned with the 66 Americans forced down in Sweden during previous operations.

The German-controlled Danish radio said American heavy bombers flew over Denmark at noon and four were shot down, a number of the crews being taken prisoner.

Bomb-weary Berliners got a rest from heavy bombers last night, but the RAF sent out mosquitos to hit objectives in western Germany for the second night in a row. No Mosquitos were lost.

Stockholm reports said the Nazis were making great effort to evacuate what is left of Berlin, with the mass departure overcrowding trains as far away as the Swiss border.

Another Swedish report quoted by the Algiers radio said the mass exodus from Berlin had reduced the city's population from four millions to one million. (Even war workers whose presence is not mandatory are being ordered to go to East Prussia, said a British broadcast recorded in New York.)

Batista Defeat Forecast By Cuban Congressman

Miami, Fla., Jan. 4 (AP).—Congressman P. Pendas, House leader of a Cuban minority party, predicted here today that Fulgencio Batista would be defeated in 1944 for reelection to the presidency of Cuba.

Pendas said the new law providing for selection of the President by popular vote instead of the present electoral vote, will result in the election of Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin.

Reich Morale, Production High, OWI Say

By Ben W. Gilbert

The Office of War Information reported yesterday the War Department has found no evidence that the German home front is cracking, but that, on the contrary, "German war production is still high, despite allied bombings, and "the German army is still powerful and resourceful, and its morale is high."

Summarizing the progress of the war in a special report, OWI said:

"Our military leaders, while they would welcome a crumbling of the (German) home front, aren't counting on it. They believe that this time it will take military might to bring the Germans to their knees, and they purpose to furnish whatever it takes. As they see it, our job is to roll up such a preponderance of land and air power, from the East, the West, and the South that the German military leaders will realize that further fighting is useless and that surrender is the more sensible alternative.

"It probably will require a lot of fighting before the German generals come to any such conclusion."

OWI summed up the situation in the Pacific:

"Despite the islands recovered from the apanese, and the ships and planes sunk, we are still 3000 miles from Tokyo and a long way to victory."

Reviewing the progress of the past year, OWI said the United Nations have liberated approximately one-fifth of the territory held by Germany a year ago and approximately one-twentieth of the territory held by Japan on the same date.

A total of 390,000 square miles have been retaken from the Germans, including 315,000 square miles of Russia which the Soviet armies have freed. The American and British armies have knocked the Axis out of the 40,000 square miles they held in North Africa, and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's forces have liberated 37,600 square miles in southern Europe, including Sicily, Sardinia, Corsica and southern Italy.

Approximately 1,670,000 square miles of Europe are still held by the Germans, including Germany itself, OWI said.

In the Pacific, we have wrested 160,150 square miles from Japan out of a total of more than three million square miles held by the Nipponese a year ago.

Stiffer Defenses Ahead

OWI cautioned that "the territory we have so far liberated lay along the outer extremities and the closer we get to the enemy's heart (Japan and Germany proper), the stiffer the defenses are likely to be."

We face a German army of more than 300 divisions which is "still relatively intact, well-equipped, magnificently trained and in fighting spirit," OWI said. Sixty new divisions have replaced the 20 lost by the Nazis at Stalingrad and the eight lost in North Africa.

As to the German air force, it has been converted over from emphasis on bombers to fighters. Aircraft production in Germany increased 25 per cent during the first half of 1943, but losses exceeded production during the last half of the year, according to the War Department, OWI said.

"The Army concludes," OWI said, "that despite its losses, the German air force is still powerful and if given a chance to recuperate, it may be expected to come back rapidly and strongly."

Allied bombings have reduced German war production, but "not to a critical degree due to the wide dispersion and decentralization of German industry," OWI said. German workers in heavy industry and soldiers are better fed than they were in 1939," OWI said.

Japs Have Enough Supplies

As to Japan, "the Army estimates that Japan has sufficient supplies of all but a few commodities to wage a long war." The Japanese army has 60 divisions—could be increased to 80 divisions. Japan has no manpower shortage.

"Japan's weakest spot is its ships, and we have already inflicted considerable damage there. We have sunk some 1500 of its ships, about two-thirds of them merchant ships and the remainder naval craft. Japan must have a large merchant fleet if it is to make full use of the rubber in Malaya, the oil in the Dutch East Indies, and other war commodities it gained in its seizure of those territories. . . . It is estimated that thus far we have sent to the bottom approximately a third of Japan's prewar merchant fleet."

Arnold Tells of Amazing Growth Of Air Arm as Greatest Strength

By James S. King

"The Army Air Forces which the Axis calculated would be the weak link in our chain of battle, has instead turned out to be our greatest strength and has so far supplied our margin of victory," says Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Air Forces commanding general, in his report to the Secretary of War.

"Our arm of the service has been in continuous contact with the enemy over all the continents and all the oceans. Since the tragic day of December 7, 1941, we have been operating day and night in all conceivable kinds of terrain.

"From the wreckage of a score of airfields scattered in the Pacific area rose an air force of 2,385,000 officers and enlisted men—a number still growing. As of October 31, 1943, those men have already flown over a quarter of a million combat sorties, expended in combat more than 40 million rounds of ammunition, used up nearly two billion gallons of gasoline, destroyed in aerial combat 8478 enemy planes, probably destroyed 2555 more and damaged another 2834. These figures do not include enemy planes destroyed on the ground nor the extraordinary score run up by the American Volunteer Group in China."

Once Third of Personnel

The man who now directs the operations of the world's greatest air force has first-hand knowledge of its growth for he, to use Arnold's own words, "at one time in the earliest days constituted exactly one-third of all Army flying personnel. We were then a section of the Signal Corps."

Arnold says, however:

"No man, no group of men and no combination of groups could possibly have created the Army Air Forces. We have become a realty through the outpouring of the will and energy of an entire nation.

"Our enterprise reached into the lives of every American. Industries were mobilized, plants were constructed or converted with dazzling speed, millions of our citizens pulled up stakes and pitched into the work at hand with spirit, resourcefulness and enthusiasm of our country's pioneers.

Skill and Devotion Pooled

"The high school graduate put his diploma in a bureau drawer and enlisted as an aviation cadet. The housewife became a welder. 3000 miles from home. The farmer and his family walked to church on Sunday, to save half a gallon of gas for use over embattled Henderson Field. The skill, devotion, and hope of our people were focused on the Army Air Forces."

The general says this skill and devotion were effective because while the Nazis were building their Luftwaffe and the Japanese militarists were charting their "coprosperity sphere" in East Asia, the Army Air Corps, predecessor of the Army Air Forces, was itself drawing its blueprints for war.

"Those blueprints go back to 1935 when the General Headquarters Air Force was established," his report explains. "Previously, the Army's air power had been under the piecemeal direction of corps commanders. A 10-year program was begun in 1935, although the Army Air Forces received but a small fraction of the promised funds."

Could Fly Anywhere

Arnold says the blueprints were based upon the theory that if the air force could fly in our own hemisphere, with its vast seas, huge land areas, great distances, and varying terrains and climates, it could fly anywhere—"and such has proved the case. We operated on these principles:

"(1) The No. 1 job of an air force is bombardment. We must have long-range bombers which can hit the enemy before he hits us; in short, the best defense is attack. The value of long-range bombardment has since been shown in the battles of midway and the Bismarck Sea, in the campaigns of North Africa and New Guinea, in the campaign from the air against key facilities in the heart of Germany.

"(2) Our planes must be able to function under all climatic conditions, from the North to the South Pole.

"(3) We believed in daylight operations.

"(4) We operated with a precision bombsight.

"(5) We developed highly trained crews, accustomed to working as a team.

Precision Bombing

"(6) We believed in the strategic precision bombing of key targets deep in the enemy's territory, such as airplane factories, aluminum plants, and submarine building bases—as illustrated today by Eighth Air Force operations from England over Germany.

"7. We practiced tactical operations in cooperation with ground troops. We used fighters, dive-bombers, and light bombers for attacking enemy airfields, communication centers, motor convoys, and troops by means of hedge-hopping aircraft. Such operations have paid dividends in North Africa.

"8 We planned combined operations with the Army ground forces and the Navy, such as have taken place in the Aleutians, in Italy, and in the Southwest Pacific.

"9 Our research program put special emphasis on high-altitude flight, and we refused to become discouraged when on October 30, 1935, the first experimental Flying Fortress, the XB-17, crashed and burned on its test flight at Wright Field. We ordered 13 more at once."

Planned Entire System

Arnold says the General Headquarters Air Force also was responsible for our present ideas of organization, maintenance and supply. Mere numbers of planes were not enough; there must be airmen, air bases, and air supply, as well as airplanes, and, perhaps most important of all, an industrial system that could replace planes that were lost with the best obtainable.

"We had the best air-crew material in the world. Our youths were accustomed to team work, competition and mechanical processes. The mechanical knowledge gained from rebuilding a $10 used car has doubtless saved the life of many an American by enabling him to 'nurse' a damaged plane home.

"Our commercial airlines were flying more miles than all the rest of the world's airlines put together. The standard commercial transport, the DC-3, was to become one of the Army's best military transports . . . We also had in 1939 some 30,000 civilian pilots, who could fly or train others.

$113 Per Pound

"The aviation industry was spending substantial sums on research projects, although it could not match the millions being poured into Nazi-subsidized laboratories . . . Airplane research and development is time-consuming, heartbreaking and costly. It can now be stated that a total of $852,000 was spent in developing the P-38 Lightning fighter—$113 per pound.

"The Air Corps always endeavored to nourish the aviation industry with experimental and sustaining orders. Although at our air bases for many years we were often grounded for lack of gasoline due to lean appropriations, experimental work went on."

In addition to lack of funds, there were other handicaps, Arnold points out.

"The people's aversion to all forms of war forced us into makeshift methods. The Army Air Forces had to teach the Nation that large numbers of planes did not in themselves constitute air power; we had to show the folly of 'the numbers racket.' We designed different planes to do different jobs, and shouted from the hangar tops that no one 'superplane' could do everything.

No Other Choice

"The Army Air Forces had to educate some of its own officers, accustomed to struggling along for years on bread and water budgets, to the fact that unprecedented expansion was not only possible, but that there was no other choice."

In spite of it all, however, our principal airplanes were flying successfully before Pearl Harbor. B-17 Flying Fortresses were produced in 1938; mass production of B-24 Liberators began early in 1941; B-25 Mitchell medium bombers were designed in 1938, produced in February, 1941; B-26 Marauder medium bombers were designed in 1939, mass produced in February, 1941; the P-38 Lightning fighter was designed in 1936, first flew in 1939, and started coming off the production lines in January, 1941; P-39 Airacobra and P-40 Warhawk fighter production began in 1940, with P-47 Thunderbolt fighters coming off the line in November, 1941; P-51 Mustang fighters were already in production for the British.

(Another of a series of articles on General Arnold's report will appear tomorrow.—Editor's note.)

Group Says Tax Bill Aids War Profiteers

Right About Face

WPB Lifts Blade, Razor Restrictions

By Walter Wood

The Bearded Lady won't be interested and "One-Way" Corrigan probably doesn't care, but the War Production Board yesterday authorized unlimited production of razors and razor blades and the Office of Price Administration put ceilings on the prices of used airplanes.

These actions are two of several illustrating the day-to-day conversion of war production and the postwar trend of thought.

Others were:

1. Permission to pack in metal cans 22 items prohibited last year—five foods among them.

2. Lifting of restriction on replacement of home oil burners over 10 years old or beyond repair.

Uniform Innersoles

At the same time, members of the Army, Navy, Marines and the War Production Board cemented their feelings of unity by agreeing on a uniform selection of innersoles for military shoes. It will be optional, however, with the armed services whether they will accept the innersoles "full grained or degrained," an announcement said.

WPB's order removing previous restrictions on the production of razors and blades—restrictions which limited their manufacture to orders from the armed forces—removes the absolute ban on straight razors and lifts the limitations on safety razor blades for civilians.

If the face you love to touch has shown the effects of the war on the home front, take heart.

Off Critical List

WPB said the facilities needed for the manufacture of razors and blades cannot be adapted to other war production and that the metals required are no longer on the critical list.

In addition, WPB said, production of these gentlemen's necessities is a "highly mechanized" process which will not affect manpower shortages.

The OPA action placing ceiling prices on used planes, requested by the Civil Aeronautics Administration, rolled them back to levels of October 1, 1941, and covers single-engine machines of not more than 500 horsepower. A depreciation in price of 8 per cent per year is stipulated.

Available to Civilians

Since the start of the war nearly all sales of used planes have been made to the CAA for training purposes but it now appears OPA said, that they will be sold in increasing numbers to civilian pilots.

For exmaple, if you want to buy a Piper (J36-50) plane of the "family type," which was built in 1938 and was listed then at $1386, it will cost $793.44. The airplane would have "standard equipment" and not require any repairs in order to be certified for use, it was said.

Food items which may now be put up in cans instead of glass containers are lemon juice, sweet syrups, cranberries, pimientos and boned chicken.

Other goods which manufacturers can put in "tin cans" this year instead of jars and bottles are alcohol, inflammable cleaning fluid, auto brake fluid, movie film, polishes and waxes, roof paint, turpentine, lubricating oil, motor oil, putty and caulking compounds, lacquers, shellacs, liquid disinfectants and germicides, antifreeze, varnishes, liquid insecticides and fungicides and varnish removers.

Four Senators Assail Renegotiation Plan As a 'Trojan Horse'

Four members of the Senate Finance Committee yesterday joined in a minority report to the Senate assailing tax bill renegotiation law changes as a "Trojan Horse" that would open the way "for a new crop of war millionaires."

Insisting excess profits taxes alone will not prevent war profiteering, the minority report keynoted the tax bill fight that will break in the Senate next week by charging "emasculation" of the renegotiation law with changes that in some cases will "compel profits."

The report was signed by Senators Walsh of Massachusetts, Connally of Texas, Lucas of Illinois (Democrat), and La Follette (Progressive) of Wisconsin.

Releasing a statement on minority views, Senator Walsh said Senators Truman of Missouri and Hatch of New Mexico (Democrats) of the Truman committee and Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee of the Appropriations Committee have "expressed their concurrence" in the minority stand. In addition, he said Senate Majority Leader Barkley has voiced general opposition to most of the proposed amendments to the renegotiation law.

Statute Has Been Effective

"The renegotiation statue has provided an effective means of limiting war profiteering," the minority statement said. "Under it, war contractors have been allowed liberal profits on their war business, but inordinate profits have been eliminated. . . . Through its operation, the soldiers and the public have been given a measure of assurance that no group would make exorbitant profits during the war from munitions and war supplies."

The report cited 200 examples of excessive profits after taxes, selected from cases in process of renegotiation by the War Department. It said 40 of these showed more than 100 per cent earned after taxes, while several companies earned over 500 per cent, and one earned 965 per cent.

Specifically, the four Senators opposed five Finance Committee-approved changes in the renegotiation law.

First they charged that proposed exemption of "standard commercial articles" from war contract renegotiation would permit excessive profits free of taxes of a quarter billion dollars on Navy and Maritime shipbuilding programs alone.

Heavy Government Refunds

Second, it charged as much as half a billion dollars must be turned back by the Government to war subcontractors if another amendment redefining "subcontract" is approved. This amendment exempts from renegotiation profits on subcontracted products which are not physically incorporated in war items actually handled by a soldier or sailor.

Third, the report complained of an alleged "sleeper" which exempts retroactively prices and profits on any article furnished in obedience to a WPB directive and under an OPA ceiling. "This mysterious provision may be tantamount to repeal of renegotiation for all production except combat weapons," the statement said.

Fourth, the minority objected to an amendment permitting de novo appeal to the Court of Claims of all renegotiation cases, including those which contractors already have agreed to close. The report charged this amendmen "invites litigation which neither party wants" by reopening for appeal all case: closed by mutual agreement.

Fifth, the statement said another subsection "requires renegotiation to allow for a mare's nest of suppositions: Probable net income after taxes, hypothetical future losses, potential reconversion expenses, etc."

widow of Rear Admiral Denfield.

The Leary, commissioned December 5, 1919, was armed with four 4-inch and one 3-inch guns. She had quarters for 145 officers and men, but that complement would be increased in time of war.

Kyes, skipper of the Leary, was born in Everett, Wash., in 1906, and graduated from the Naval Academy in 1930. He was given command of the Leary in August, 1942, after previous service aboard the aircraft carriers Saratoga and Ranger. His wife lives in Seattle.

Parents Live Here

Wygant, whose home address is Camp Hill, Pa., was born in Kingfisher, Okla., and graduated from the Naval Academy in 1930. He served six years on various ships and was stationed on Guam from 1936 to 1938. He returned to sea duty and took command of the Turner last February. His wife, Peggy, lives at Long Island, N. Y.

His parents have lived in Washington seven years. There is one other son and three daughters. The commander's brother-in-law, Lieut. Comdr. T. A. Donovan, was reported missing for almost two years after the Battle of Java, during which he commanded the Langley. Six weeks ago, however, the brother-in-law was reported a prisoner of the Japanese.

In 1934 Wygant was commended by the Secretary of the Navy for gallant action in a futile attempt to rescue a Navy pilot whose plane crashed into shark-infested waters after taking off from a carrier. He commanded a rescue boat that put out in an effort to save the flier and he dived into the water and brought up the body.

Secretary of Navy Knox said at a press conference yesterday that the Germans "are imitating the Japanese" in making fantastic claims. He referred specifically to a Berlin broadcast which said that 21 United Nations destroyers had been sunk by U-boats in the last ten days. On the contrary, he said, the only recent such sinking was that of the destroyer (Leary) which was torpedoed in the Atlantic December 24.

Navy Orders 20 Mars Craft For Cargo Duty

By the Associated Press

The Navy ordered yesterday 20 additional Martin Mars flying boats like the original 70-ton ship which a high ranking Navy officer said in 1942 "was obsolete insofar as performance is concerned."

The world's larget flying boat, designed an constructed by the Glenn L. Martin Co. in Baltimore, will be used in the naval air transport service, Secretary Knox announced, with the first of the 20 to be delivered in about a year.

The failure of the first tests of the Mars resulted from burning out of one of the four motors. The two final Mars flights before her delivery last fall to the Navy trial board proved the ship could not only maintain altitude but climb with two of her four giant propellers feathered.

Set New Records

The Mars set new records in 1943 for cargo transportation and over-water flight, flying 13,000 pounds of mail nonstop for 14,375 miles to Natal, Brazil, and returning 23,000 pounds of critical war materials.

A prediction that replicas of the Mars, which has a wing spread of 200 feet, probably would not be constructed in the near future was made by Rear Admiral J. H. Towers in 1942. Admiral Towers at that time was the recently replaced chief of the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics.

The original Mars, biggest operating plane in the world, shortly will go into service in the Pacific, Knox said.

8000 Horsepower

The ship is powered with four Wright Cyclone-18 engines delivering more than 9000 horsepower each. She has sleeping accommodations for 16, and a fully equipped galley. Her flight deck is so large that her captain can pace it just as he would a steamer's bridge. Operating over normal distances she can carry in excess of 15 tons of carg , more than is carried by an ordinary freight car.

Glenn L. Martin, president of the company which built the ship, said that unofficially the Mars set new standards for gross load at takeoff; she left the water at 141,000 pounds; carried 22 persons on an endurance flight; carried approximately a tank car load of fuel at take off. In addition, Martin said, she estbalished what are believed to be new onrefueling endurance marks for seaplanes, four-engined airplanes and airplanes of over 30,000 pounds per gross weight.

Steel Workers Remain on Job As Pact Expires

Pittsburgh, Jan. 4 (AP).—Collective bargaining contracts between the CIO-United Steelworkers of America and six subsidiaries of U.S. Steel Corp. employing 200,000 persons expired at midnight last night, but union members obeyed CIO President Philip Murray's instructions to stay on the job while contract negotiations continue.

When negotiations recessed last Friday, Murray asked the workers not to interrupt production. The contract conferences are scheduled to resume tomorrow.

Last month, expiration of similar contracts of 214 companies led to a three-day work stoppage by 170,000 workers in 9 States.

Prince Bernhard Expects to Be in Holland This Year

By the Associated Press

Prince Consort Bernhard of the Netherlands, arriving yesterday for a brief visit at the White House, said he expects to be back home later this year.

Discussing the war situation, Prince Bernhard said he thought things look very much better, disclosed that he was returning to London soon and then remarked to a reporter:

"I'll see you in the Netherlands this year if you can come there."

Prince Bernhard is the husband of Princess Julianna. President Roosevelt is the godfather of their third daughter.

Rain Cloud Extinguishes Fortress Fire

A story of how a crippled Flying Fortress, dubbed "Damnfino," doused a fire in one engine by ducking into a rain cloud and bluffed three Nazi planes in a dramatic struggle over the North Sea, was told yesterday by a Washington pilot.

PARSONS

He is Lieut. Earl R. Parsons, 29, of 1648 Primrose rd. nw., copilot of the "Damnfino," who holds the Air Medal for exceptional achievement as a member of the Eighth United States Air Force.

The huge Fortress was forced by engine trouble to turn back before reaching its target in northwest Germany. However, the crew dumped its bombs on a German seaport and headed for home. Twelve of their guns went out of commission or were jettisoned in order to lighten the ship.

Then things began to happen. Three German Junkers attacked, but the crew members held them off by aiming their empty turret mountings at them.

"The Jerries apparently thought every one of our guns were working," said Lieutenant Parsons. "Every time we got rid of them we'd duck into a cloud. The third time a heavy rain put out the engine fire, which helped relieve the situation a lot, and finally, on the fourth attempt, we lost the Germans."

Lieutenant Parsons, a native of Baltimore, was educated here at McKinley High School and George Washington University. Prior to entering the Army he was employed by the Agriculture Department.

War Sidelights

Hitler's Talk Seen Costing Him His Life

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—Emil Ludwig, historian and biographer, said today Adolf Hitler's New Year proclamation to the German nation was "a victory for the Allies" and predicted it would lead to der Feuhrer's death.

"Hitler," said Ludwig in a letter to The Times, "is a moriturus (as good as dead) after this manifesto. The generals are well aware that it will cost him the last enthusiasts among his following. In these days the date of his death will be fixed."

Citing Hitler's words that "if millions of people no longer possess anything to lose, they can only gain something," Ludwig said the dictator "has never uttered more foolish ones to a people he promised to lead to world dominion," and added:

"Even a Nazi must scent the Fuehrer's secret fear, his embarrassment, must notice that he is trying to prepare his readers for coming disaster, like a doctor who has to announce the imminent death of a patient . . .

"But the effect of his proclamation on the generals is still more important . . . A military man forgives defeat because lost battles belong to a war, but a junker will not back a helpless stumbler, an atheist who ends up his important jeers with a prayer to the 'Maker.' No Prussian general will take that from a King—or a leader."

Sees Hitler Cheating Trial

Jan Masaryk, Czechoslovak Foreign Minister, predicted here yesterday that Hitler won't live long enough to be tried as a war criminal.

"He'll eithe. be taken care of by the military or commit suicide," Masaryk told an interviewer.

Blamed for Loss of Army

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—The German-controlled Rome radio said today that the Italian Lieut. Gen. Mario Caracciolo, 60, had been arrested in a Franciscan monastery in Rome where he had been hiding since the Italian capitulation and that he would be "called to account" for the disappearance of his army of 500,000 men. The broadcast was recorded by the OWI.

$850 Year Teacher Has $155,000 Estate

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 4 (AP).—An estate of $155,000 was left by Ella Strong, 92, a teacher for 53 years at an average annual salary of $850, her will probated here today in county court showed.

Miss Strong built up her fortune through "wise investments," Mrs. Mary Wilson, a niece said. School officials made the salary estimate.

Wheat Placed On 100% Parity In OPA Order

By Christine Sadler

The Office of Price Administration yesterday placed hard wheat under price control and raised price ceilings for soft wheat, giving all classes of the grain a selling price reflecting at least 100 per cent of parity.

These prices will be in addition to any Government payments made to wheat farmers, OPA said, and are "well above almost all levels that prevailed in the last 15 years until recent months."

The basic hard wheat price was set at $1.63 a bushel for No. 1 hard winter wheat at Kansas City, Mo., and $1.64⅛ a bushel for No. 1 heavy dark northern spring wheat at Minneapolis.

The basic soft wheat price was raised from $1.66 a bushel for No. 1 soft red wheat at Chicago and St. Louis to $1.72⅞.

The prices include 1½ cents a bushel charged by commission men and are therefore 1½ cents above the formula price as announced by the OPA.

The recent flour subsidy program was designed to protect the consumer against the wheat increases by preventing a flour-price rise that would be reflected in bread costs.

Other food-front developments yesterday included:

1. Flat denial by Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, that ODT had charged the War Food Administration with "waste, hoarding and inefficiency, and with being responsible for what was termed a civilian shortage of perishable foodstuffs"—as published in a local paper yesterday.

ODT has made statements dealing with the tight storage situation and suggested some remedies, he said, bue never "charged." WFA with storage bungling. Working together, he declared, the two agencies have made many recent improvements in the freezer storage situation.

He declared no foodstuff had spoiled in refrigerator cars that had to be left on sidings pending storage or transfer to ships.

2. WFA warned growers and shippers of fruits and vegetables that new wooden containers would be scarce this year and that "the outlook is dark for egg crates of all kinds, meat-packing boxes, and similar containers. The situation is such "many fruits and vegetables and other food items will either be delivered in used containers or not at all," it declared.

3. OPA granted regional offices permission to adjust wholesale prices on bananas upward "by not more than 35 cents per hundred pounds," but said the increase could not be reflected in higher retail prices.

4. War Production Chief Donald Nelson wrote President Roosevelt the WPB was accelerating its interest in in-plant feeding and rest facilities.

The communication was in reply to a letter from the President, who said: "I am informed that many war production plants are now badly in need of these facilities."

Nelson said the WPB had approved all deserving applications for facilities and considers them "essential for the war effort" and therefore eligible for construction during the war.

Three Czech Women Executed by Nazis

Bern, Switzerlnad, Jan. 4 (AP).—A Prague dispatch said today that three Czech women had been executed after sentence by a Nazi court at Bruenn on a charge of sheltering enemies of Germany who were being sought by the police.

Peck Given No. 2 Marine Post; Other Promotions Announced

Secretary of the Navy Knox announced yesterday promotion of Brig. Gen. Dewitt Peck of Clayton, N. Y., to the rank of major general and his appointment as assistant commandant of the Marine Corps, succeeding Maj. Gen. Keller E. Rockey.

Rockey, a native of Columbia City, Ind., will be given command of the Fifth Marine Division, a new division of the Marine Corps.

Knox also announced promotion of Col. Gerald C. Thomas, Bloomington, Ill., to brigadier general and Thomas' appointment as director of the Marine Corps Division of Plans and Policies.

Retirement of Vice Admiral John W. Greenslade as commander of the western sea frontier and commandant of the Twelfth Naval District, effective February 1, also was announced by Knox.

Greenslade will be succeeded as commander of the western sea frontier by Rear Admiral David W. Bagley of Raleigh, N. C., now commandant of the 11th Naval District with headquarters in San Diego. Bagley's new headquarters will be at San Francisco.

The new commandant of the 12th Naval District with headquarters in San Francisco will be Rear Admiral Carleton H. Wright, Crestwood, Ky., who will report at San Francisco from a command at sea.

Changes in command also will move Rear Admiral Wilhelm L. Friedell from assignment as commandant of the Mare Island, Calif., navy yard to succeed Bagley as commandant of the 11th Naval District. Friedell, of Texarkana, Ark., will be succeeded as Mare Island commandant by Rear Admiral Mallon S. Tisdale, Annapolis, who has commanded a task force at sea.

Sergeant Seeks Air Combat Duty For Excitement

United States Fortress Base in Britain, Jan. 4 (AP).—At this own request Tech. Sergt. Henry J. Streets, Dryfork, W. Va., is back on combat duty after completing one tour of duty and turning to the United States.

"I was pacing the floor," Streets said. "Once you've been in combat you miss the excitement."

The aerial gunner finished the number of missions required to retire him from combat duty and returned home. After a 15-day furlough he was assigned to an armament shop at Dyersburg, Tenn.

Two days there were enough for Streets, who told his officers he thought he could best serve his country back on combat duty in England. The 31-year-old sergeant wears the DFC, Air Medal and three Oak Leaf Clusters.

Hearings Called In FEPC Probe By House Group

First of a series of hearings in a House inquiry into the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee is secheduled for next Tuesday, Aaron L. Ford, general counsel of the Smith committee investigating the acts of executive agencies, revealed last night.

Witnesses will be representatives of the employes union of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co., who will describe union opposition to an FEPC directive to the company. Ford said the union had opposed company compliance with an FEPC directive regarding the employment of Negroes.

Representative Smith (Democrat) of Virginia revealed it was likely his committee would later study FEPC actions in connection with the Capital Transit Co.

Nazi Labor Chief Killed

At the Italian-Swiss Frontier, Jan. 4 (AP).—German Labor Chief Hans Hobel was among the most recent victims of sporadic resistance by Italians against the Nazis and Fascists in northern Italy, reports reaching the frontier said today. Hobel was killed in a street in Fiume in daylight.

OPA Warned Tokens Threaten Chaos in Transit Operations

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—The American Transit Association asked the Office of Price Administration today to change the size of its ration tokens scheduled for use next February 27, saying: "They will create more chaos than the steel pennies which the mint recently stopped producing."

The ATA, representing virtually all domestic transit systems, said there was a danger that people might use the blue and red fiber tokens illicitly as transit tokens which might eventually cause a breakdawn in collection facilities and seriously affect the more than 60 million passengers riding daily on transit lines.

Charles Gordon, managing director of the ATA, said in a letter to OPA Chief Chester Bowles that the OPA originally had agreed to use ration tokens about 1 inch in diameter, but had abandoned that plan to issue them almost exactly the same size and width as transit tokens.

He added the OPA tokens also would be only slightly smaller in diameter than a dime, and about the same width.

Gordon said tests of the proposed official OPA ration tokens made by representatives of the ATA, Osborne Register Co. and OPA had "conclusively demonstrated" these results:

About 18,000 electric fare boxes would be rendered inoperative;

Approximately 26,000 hopper fare boxes would accept and register the ration token;

About 14,000 open hopper boxes will not register the OPA token but will accept it and eventually jam the box;

Approximately 5500 turnstiles, each handling up to 10,000 passengers a day, will be affected (turnstiles taking metal tokens might continue to turn freely if the OPA token were inserted wet, thus permitting passage of an indefinite number of passengers without payment of additional fare).

Swedish Observer Sees Collapse of Reich by Invasion

Stockholm, Jan. 4 (AP).—Germany is shaken to her "very foundations" by bombing, and invasion of Europe might cause the Nazi home front to collapse, a Swedish aviation commentator said today.

Writing in Tidningen, Stig Wennerstroem expressed doubt that bombing alone could win the war since this could only "wound and not kill the Reich's decentralized industry." He added:

"What happened to Italy could happen to Germany at the moment of invasion. Germany may be so weakened materially and her morale may be sapped to such an extent that only the mere fact of invasion might cause a collapse."

His opinion about the possible collapse of Germany is not shared by some Swedish correspondents in Berlin. Some of these reported that bombings in many cases brought the people closer together and hardened many to the effects of total war.

2 D. C. Area Men Listed Dead, 1 Missing, 2 Injured in Action

One former Washington man and one from the Washington area have died while serving overseas, a third is missing, and two others have been wounded, it was learned here yesterday.

SMITH

Dead are Pvt. Edward De Selding Melcher, a former drama editor of the Star, and Staff Sergt. James Taillie Smith, jr., of 1724 Duke st., Alexandria. Missing is Lieut. Charles E. Besley of Wakefield, Fairfax County.

The wounded men are Lieut. Orval W. Webb of 1409 19th st. se. and Pvt. John D. Kendall, jr., whose address was given as 3314 Cathedral ave. nw.

Private Melcher, 37, died in Africa on Thursday, according to word received yesterday from the War Department by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Stevens Melcher of New York City.

Private Melcher joined the drama staff of the Star shortly after his graduation from Harvard University in 1928. He later became drama editor, a job he held for five years, after which he went to Hollywood as a script writer.

He enlisted in April, 1941, and at the time of his death was assistant editor of Bonjour, a paper published for American troops in Dakar.

Surviving in addition to his parents are a brother, John Melcher, and a sister, Mrs. Lowell Cheetham.

Staff Sergt. Smith, 25, died November 24 in Italy as a result of injuries received in action, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Smith, have been informed by the War Department. He had completed 55 combat missions.

An aerial observer with the field artillery in Italy, Sergeant Smith made flights behind the German lines in a Piper Cub plane.

Born in Hopewell, Va., Sergeant Smith attended school in Marion, N. C. He moved to Alexandria with his parents in 1934 and was employed as manager of the Acme Market on Glebe rd. when he entered the Army in April, 1941. He won his wings at an air force school in North Africa and named his plane the "Wilma Elaine" for his wife and daughter.

His wife, the former Miss Wilma Harris, a nurse at the Alexandria Hospital, whom he married in 1942, and their 11-month-old daughter, Betty Elaine, are now living with Mrs. Smith's mother in Lumberton, N. C.

Lieutenant [illegible]sley, 26, a bomber pilot, has been missing on a mission in the New Guinea area since December 20, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Besley of Wakefield have been notified.

A graduate of the Lee-Jackson High School in Fairfax, Lieutenant Besley attended Virginia Polytechnic Institute where he majored in architectural engineering. Enlisting in the Air Corps several days after the attack on Pearl Harbor, he received his wings at Columbus Field, Miss., in September, 1942. He went overseas last April.

Lieutenant Webb, 25, a paratrooper, was shot in the kneecap November 17, by an enemy sniper while operating behind German lines in Italy, according to his brother, Paul E. Webb of the 19th street address.

One of the first to reach North Africa from England during the initial invasion last year, Lieutenant Webb also participated in the Sicilian campaign. He was cited for bravery October 15 and promoted from staff sergeant to lieutenant for action behind the German lines. Trained at Camp Wheeler and at Fort Benning, Ga., he went overseas in the spring of 1942.

Private Kendall, the son of Mrs. John D. Kendall, also was wounded while stationed in the Mediterranean combat zone.

Duke of Roxburghe Gets U. S. Tax Refund

A $195,588 tax refund to the Duke of Roxburghe of Kelso, Scotland, was announced yesterday by the Treasury.

The department said the sum represented taxes withheld at the source in this country above the amount the duke was found to owe after an investigation. It declined further information.

ODT Order Bars Convention Bids By Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Jan. 4 (AP).—Mayor Bernard Samuel announced today that Philadelphia will not bid for either of the 1944 national presidential conventions, because the city has been ruled out by the Office of Defense Transportation. He added, however, that the city will seek both conventions in 1948.

Chicago, Jan. 4 (AP).—Organization of a Chicago convention committee, which would seek to raise sufficient funds to make bids for the Republican and Democratic national conventions, will be perfected at a meeting tomorrow. Businessmen will be asked to help raise a fund tentatively set at $150,000, providing $75,000 for each convention.

An early start for the presidential campaign with June conventions for both major parties was advocated yesterday by Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan to facilitate absentee voting by members of the armed forces.

Vandenberg told a reporter he is convinced that if servicemen are to vote in November, presidential nominations must be made by July 1 at the latest.

What surprising things the War gets from a SOAPMAKER!

THE SIMPLE PURPOSE of Procter & Gamble has always been to give you the best of soap—to serve you and your family with Ivory and Oxydol and Camay and Duz.

Yet today finds us, like all Americans who love their native land, deeply immersed in the effort of war.

We are still making soap. We still serve the household and the home. And in addition, we are doing hundreds of things today that five years ago we never dreamed of doing. Every one of our 29 plants is, to a greater or lesser degree, at the service of our Armed Forces and our Allies.

In some we make soap and its by-product, glycerine, and glycerine goes into explosives like dynamite and smokeless powder and cordite.

In others, we turn out shortening for the Army's field rations, we help the Navy keep its brass and copper shining, we produce materials that go into plastics for the bombers of our Air Force.

In two tremendous new plants—built and owned by Uncle Sam, but staffed and managed by Procter & Gamble—we assemble and load shells with TNT and other explosives.

In fact, each and every one of our factories is hard at work, doing everything a soapmaker can do to help win the war—producing things important to the fighting front, the production front and the home front that backs them both.

And that is why today we are proud to say: "29 Procter & Gamble plants—and all doing their part"!

SOAP is a TOOL of PEACE and a WEAPON of WAR

29 PLANTS ALL DOING THEIR PART

FOR THE HOME FRONT—THE PRODUCTION FRONT—THE FIGHTING FRONT

Two Accused of Plot to Nazify U. S. to Say They'll Surrender

Attorneys for Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling and Joseph E. McWilliams advised Chicago's Assistant District Attorney William J. Connor yesterday that their clients would surrender to warrants when they arrive and would not oppose removal to Washington to face trial on charges of conspiring to undermine the morale of the armed forces to set up a Nazi government here.

Mrs. Dilling, the red-haired author of the "Red Network," and McWilliams, fiery exponent of anti-Semitism, are two of 30 persons indicted Monday on the charges by a special District grand jury here.

No date has been set for the trial.

Silly, She Says

From Chicago, the Associated Press reported that Mrs. Dilling's comment on the indictment—she was named on two similar indictments here—was that it was "silly."

"They're linking my name with the others to nail my mouth shut," Mrs. Dilling said. "The silliest thing is the charge I tried to set up a Nazi government here. That's what we've got here now and what I'm fighting—one-man government that's run by edict."

Meanwhile, the investigation into alleged conspiracy proceeded yesterday in District Court with the grand jury in session.

The defendants in the case include two former Bund leaders, Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze and August Klaprott. Other new names added were Lawrence Denniss, Ernest F. Elmhurst and Peter Stahrenberg, E. J. Parker Sage and Garland L. Alderman.

The indictment, prepared by the Justice Department on the basis of four years' investigation, charges the defendants met and carried on activities such as writing and distributing articles and delivering speeches designed to indoctrinate the people with ideas that democracy was decadent, Nazilism the best government, and that our leaders were subservient to un-American interests.

The conspiracy, the indictment related, went on from 1940 to the present.

Wounded Soldier Refused Honor To Spare Mother

New York, Jan. 4 (INS).—The story of an American soldier who refused the Purple Heart for wounds in action on Guadalcanal, because he feared the news would worry his mother, was revealed today by the Army and Navy Committee of the Jewish Welfare Board.

The private, Leonard Fierst, has recently returned to his home in Yonkers, N. Y., after eight months of combat duty in the South Pacific.

Fierst, in the front line, turned around to discover a Jap officer behind him, saber raised in his right hand, ready to stick it in the American soldier's back. Fierst disarmed and finished off the Jap, but was wounded in the leg. The wound later became infected, and he was hospitalized.

He asked that the recommendation for a Purple Heart award be canceled "because I knew that my folks would receive official word of the award and be worried to death."

Legislators Study Broader Strike Penalty

against work stoppages in plants taken over by the Government. Civil penalties are provided for failure to give 30 days' notice of strikes in private war plants, but this provision has not been strictly inforced.

The legislator, who asked not to be identified pending further conferences next week, said he believed Congress must either undertake to tighten this law to make it effective, or enact universal service legislation.

He said he is now considering offering a simple amendment to the Connally-Smith Act to make it a criminal offense to agitate a strike in any war plant "so the Army would not have to take over" to assure uninterrupted production.

A number of legislative leaders are agreed that universal service legislation would be a more effective war productio weapon, but political opposition to any "labor draft" has tied up the Austin-Wadsworth bills in both House and Senate committees, with no early prospect of action.

Congressional sentiment, meanwhile, began to line up predominantly behind last week's "high official" warning that strike threats, seized on as an Axis propaganda weapon, had postponed a Nazi collapse.

May in Agreement

Chairman Andrew May of the House Military Committee said he did not know "whether it was General Marshall or someone else" who made the nonattributed statement, "but regardless of who it was, I agree that such a movement resulting in the mere taking charge of the American railways for operation by the Government was calculated to give hope and encouragement to Hitler and his satellite nations and especially to provide a rich source of effective propaganda for Hitler."

May said that never to his knowledge has either President Roosevelt or General Marshall "indicated the slightest hostility to the American worker," but if labor leaders took offense at the views attributed to Marshall "I suggest two methods of solution:

"1. Have no more strikes or threatened strikes while we are at war.

"2. If anyone doubts that strikes and the taking over of the railroads had the effect on the war effort claimed by the high official, then I suggest that those complaining apply to General Marshall, and I am sure he will be delighted to furnish any labor leader as the representative of any striking group free transportation to the battle fronts for an interview with our fighting men for first-hand information and verification of the result of strikes on our own fighting forces."

Model of Candor

Senator Clyde M. Reed (Republican) of Kansas attributed the warning directly to General Marshall, who he said "is a model of candor and directness."

"If the President had the intellectual integrity, the courage, and the candor of General Marshall, he long ago would have said what Marshall has said," added Reed. "Had this been said, and if the President had backed up his words with action, this crisis would not have arisen."

Reed said General Marshall's remarks were anonymous because "he felt circumscribed by a sense of loyalty to his only superior officer."

"Strikes in essential industry," said the Kansas Republican, "including transportation, in time of war are a form of treason and should be so regarded and treated."

Know It's True, Plumley Says

Representative Charles A. Plumley (Republican) of Vermont said the people do not care "who said that the rail and steel strike controversies had prolonged the war against Germany for months" because "they know it is so."

"The people will fix the responsibility, eventually, and those who have sown to the wind of trying to play politics for their selfish advantage . . . will reap the whirlwind of an outraged public sentiment."

Representative Thomas A. Jenkins (Republican) of Ohio said he thought President Green of the American Federation of Labor was "hasty" in criticizing the statement of the unnamed official.

"I don't know who he is (the official)," said Jenkins, "but I think he's right."

Hearing Scheduled Next Week On Wartime Prohibition Bill

By the Associated Press

The argument over wartime prohibition started all over again in the Capitol yesterday and except for references to what happened before, the words might have been a recording of what was said a quarter century ago.

The principal argument was Monday morning hangovers in war plants vs. insistence on personal liberties—including servicemen's claims to a voice in the decision whether they have beer.

Representative Hobbs (Democrat) of Alabama touched off the controversy by announcing that a House Judiciary Subcommittee of which he is chairman will hold hearings next week on a bill to outlaw all traffic in beverages containing more than one-half of 1 per cent alcohol by volume.

Introduced last March 4 by Representative Bryson (Democrat) of South Carolina, the legislation would impose prohibition for the duration of the war and until after demobilization of the armed forces. Its announced purpose is to curb absenteeism and promote war production, presumably through reduction of Monday morning hangovers among warworkers.

Hobbs said proponents would be heard first but did not name witnesses.

Dr. George W. Crabbe, general superintendent of the Antisaloon League of America, said he had not requested the committee meeting and did not plan to testify unless called.

Representative Wickersham (Democrat) of Oklahoma, a Prohibitionist, joined in opposition to the Bryson proposal because of its plan to dry up the country by statue.

"If we are to have prohibition, we should do it by amendment to the Constitution," Wickersham said. "I doubt if Congress has the authority."

Representative Ploeser (Republican) of Missouri, a nondrinker but not a Prohibitionist, asserted Congress would be "taking unfair advantage of the men in service if it voted prohibition while they are away fighting."

"You can't enforce morals," Ploeser added. "Our last experience with prohibition was one of the worst things that have ever happened to this country."

Predicting defeat of the measure if it reaches the House floor, Representative Cochran (Democrat) of Missouri said that 15 per cent of the output of the breweries goes to the armed forces, and men in uniforms "are pleading not to take their beer away from them."

Cochran recalled that both the War and Navy Departments had opposed legislation to establish dry areas in the vicinity of military reservations and to curb liquor sales to men in uniform, expressing preference for the services' own educational and supervisory methods to curb drinking.

perienced their quietest day since the battle of the Moro River began nearly a month ago. The Canadians had yet made no serious attempt to dislodge the Nazis from "Point 59," a strongly fortified hill about 3 miles out of Ortona on the coastal highway to Pescara.

Indian troops of the Eighth Army seized a hill 1½ miles southeast of recently captured Tommaso, and advanced up the Ortona-Miglia-Mico road almost to Tello. This advance was in support of the Canadians' push up the coast.

Air reconnaissance showed hundreds of Nazi supply trucks snowbound in the central mountain passes, and American fighter and fighter-bomber pilots were enjoying a field day destroying the helpless vehicles. Warhawk pilots alone reported wrecking 22 trucks and damaging another 8.

The Fortresses that smashed the Turin rail yards fought their way through 30 German fighters, one of which was shot down. The Villar Perosa delegation encountered no enemy fighters. Three Allied planes were lost in all the day's operations, against seven enemy craft destroyed.

ministration of the tax laws, are not permitted to advise the Congress directly and freely concerning tax administration, or give the Congress the benefit of their independent judgment regarding administrative matters. All such information must now clear through the Treasury and, of course, has to conform to preconceived Treasury policy.

"In many instances it has developed that information submitted by the Treasury is inconsistent with facts as found by the bureau. Also, it has been found upon inquiry that the bureau's own recommendations regarding administrative matters often are at odds with recommendations made to the Congress by the Treasury, supposedly on the basis of the bureau's advice. This is an unwholesome situation, and its not conducive to good leislation."

The veteran member of the Ways and Means Committee declared that Treasury was interfering with the smooth operation of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

"Some very competent career men," he charged, "occupying key positions in the bureau, have found conditions unbearable and left for other employment. If this situation is allowed to continue, a complete breakdown of efficient tax administration may result."

Knutson claimed the time has come "to completely eliminate Treasury dictation on matters of tax policy.

As Bullets Whined

D. C. Marine Saves Man On Tarawa

The quick action of Hospital Apprentice First Class Calvin H. Merkle, USN, 3100 Connecticut ave. nw., during the heavy fighting on Tarawa, has been credited with saving the life of an unidentified Marine, according to a dispatch from Marine Corps headquarters.

The account, which was written by Staff Sergt. Richard J. Murphy, jr., of 107 East Woodbine st., Chevy Chase, Md., a Marine Corps combat correspondent, said that the 18-year-old corpsman saved the Leatherneck's life by applying pressure to a wounded limb and halting the flow of blood.

Attached to a Marine field rfle unit which landed under heavy fire, Merkle was returning from a search for stretchers when he saw a Marine who had been tossing grenades into a Jap pillbox go down under enemy machine gun fire. Despite the absence of medical equipment, Merkle crawled to the marine and applied pressure to his wounded leg.

A Jap machine gun began throwing bullets over Merkle's head. Two bullets ripped the camouflage cover on his helmet and dented the helmet itself, but Merkle kept his fingers on the marine's leg. He remained there until a patrol removed the injured man to a first aid station.

Merkle, a graduate of Western High School was formerly employed by the War Department as a junior draftsman.

The Australians have been only lightly opposed of late in this northward movement which is designed to crush the Japanese between the Aussie and American forces.

A headquarters spokesman said there was no change in the situation around Arawe, on the southwest coast of New Britain, where units of the American Sixth Army were last reported pushing patrols beyond the perimeter of the area.

11 of Foes Planes Downed

This area roughly follows the base of the Arawe peninsula. Small enemy forces are operating inland north and east of the peninsula, including the old airstrip.

Rabaul, big Japanese air and supply base at the northeastern tip of New Britain, received further attention. Australians flying Beauforts Sunday bombed Lakunai airdrome and fighters of the South Pacific command in the Solomons returned to Rabaul Monday and shot down 11 of 30 intercepting Japanese fighter planes.

American and Australian fliers swept over enemy supply points on the New Britain coast, strafing and damaging a schooner and some barges.

(In Washington, Secretary of the Navy Knox reported additional details yesterday of the New Year's Day attack by an American carrier task force on Japanese ships off New Ireland. Two heavy cruisers were hit with 1000-pound bombs and torpedoes and sunk or beached at Kavieng, he said. In addition, two destroyers were bombed and strafed, one probably sinking and the other suffering severe damage.)

WLB to Act On Telegraph Case Today

The National War Labor Board will decide today whether Western Union shall be ordered to extend the contract the American Communications Association, CIO, had with Postal Telegraph at the time of the telegraph industry merger. The contract will expire Friday.

Joseph P. Selly, union president, said yesterday that he will urge union leaders from all over the Nation, attending an "emergency conference" at the Hotel Annapolis this afternoon, to keep the union's no-strike pledge "under any circumstances."

He added, however, that failure to extend the contract would "invite large-scale dislocation" in America's communications. The chairmaen of ACA's largest locals, D. C. Cardamone of Chicago and Louis Siebenberg of New York, shared Selly's doubts as to the "ability of the union leadership to keep their members in line in such a case."

During the day, the WLB as well as the White House, received telegrams from Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice president; the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, and, according to the union, 150 other local industrial union councils, urging the board to extend the contract.

Driver Held In Fatal Crash Of Automobile

Charges of reckless driving have been brought against Lloyd C. McClellan, 27, of 2627 South Adams st., Arlington, who is now receiving treatment in the Alexandria Hospital for head injuries suffered in a New Year's Eve automobile crash in which District persons were involved.

The driver of an automobile carrying eight passengers which crashed into the log guard rail of the Mount Vernon Memorial Boulevard at 12:05 a. m. New Year's Day, killing one of the occupants, McClellan was ordered held for action by the Washington United States attorney, it was announced by Dr. John A. Sims, Alexandria city coroner, following an inquest on Monday.

Allynn A. Curry, Air Transport Command pilot, was killed in the wreck.

Hospital authorities said that all of the seven survivors would recover and that Beulah Young, 26, of 1237 Seventh pl. ne., who was admitted for eye injuries, was to be released yesterday.

The accident, as reported by United States Park Police, occurred when McClellan who was driving the loaded convertible coupe toward Washington on the boulevard, lost control after passing a bus and in attempting to return to the right lane the car crashed into the guard rail, knocking down 195 feet of fence. The car came to a stop about 15 feet off the paved road, police said.

Others injured were Mrs. Ruth McClosky, 19, of 423 Hume ave.; Miss Joyce Holt, 16, of 423 Hume ave.; Miss Elinore Fladding, 17, and her sister, Rita Fladding, both of 1722 Abingdon drive, Alexandria, and Marjorie Harless of Slaters Lane, Alexandria.

Miss Shella McGonigle

Miss Stella McGonigle, 74, a resident of the District since 1930, died in a District Hospital Monday after several years' illness.

Mass will be said tomorrow, at St. Matthew's Cathedral. Burial will be in Rose Hill Cemetery, Hagerstown, Md.

A native of Leavenworth, Kans., Miss McGonigle was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James McGonigle.

Survivors include a sister, Mrs. Henry Gibbins of 2219 California st. nw.; a nephew, Lieut. Henry Gibbins, jr., now on duty overseas, and a niece, Mrs. Noel Bride of Washington.

Frankfurter's Opinions Irk 2 Colleagues

signature in agreement with Black.

Frankfurter contended the court had gone into abstract matters in deciding the patent case and described the "doctrine of contributory infringement" as "an expression both of law and morals." He spoke of this doctrine, too, as "accredited by legal history as well as ethics."

"Preconceived Views"

Black said he considered the "judicial error of discussing abstract questions" to be slight compared to the "the error of interpreting legislative enactments on the basis of a court's preconceived views of 'morals' and 'ethics.'"

"In searching for congressional intent," he went on, "we ordinarily look to such sources as statutory language and legislative history. The dissent in question mentions neither of these guides; in fact, it mentions no statute at all. Instead, the chief reliance appears to be upon the law of torts, a quotation from a decision of a lower Federal Court . . . and the writer's personal views on 'morals' and 'ethics.'

"And for judges to rest their interpretation of statutes on nothing but their own conceptions of 'morals' and 'ethicr' is, to say the least, dangerous business."

Frankfurter's dissent in the ratemaking case was on the grounds the commission should be required to set forth "with explicitness the criteria by which it is guided" in determining that rates are "just and reasonable." He said "congressional acquiescence" to take in the doctrine embodied in an earlier railroad rate case "may fairly be claimed." It was this statement which drew particular objection from Black.

Indian Famine Declared Beaten

Calcutta, Jan. 4 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Douglas Stuart, commander of British-Indian troops in Bengal, said today the famine enemy had been "decisively defeated" in the province but we are now confronted by a formidable disease enemy."

General Stuart declared malaria now was several times the normal rate, and that several areas had been swept by cholera and smallpox epidemics. The number of disease deaths is uncertain.

Stuart paid tribute to the U. S. Tenth Air Force, which loaned several transport planes to expedite distribution of supplies.

69 D. C. Bills, Shunted Aside, Await Action

By James E. Chinn

Reconvening of Congress Monday will find the Senate and House District Committees faced with an accumulation of 69 miscellaneous bills introduced last year and shunted aside for future consideration.

A newly compiled record shows Senate and House members started 85 measures affecting the District on an unpredictable legislative journey during the first session of the Seventy-eighth Congress between January and December, but only 14 were enacted into law.

A majority of the neglected bills are regarded as either minor in purpose, or too controversial to place before a wartime Congress struggling with grave national and international problems. Many of them, as a result, are destined eventually to die.

Swift Action Sought Now

Swift action is to be sought, however, on the major measures—legislation which has been sought by the Commissioners, and other District officials to correct defects in existing laws or to improve them.

Already two subcommittees of the Senate District Committee have planned to begin public hearings next week on two House-approved bills which occupy preferred positions on their respective calendars. Foremost is the one designed to destroy the so-called "baby broker racket." The other would bring the present program for aiding dependent children in the District in line with procedure followed in many States.

On the House side Chairman Randolph of the District Committee plans to call a meeting within the next two weeks at which he hopes to get action on at least nine long-pending measures. He said he is particularly anxious to place before the House a bill sponsored by Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, to broaden the powers of the Commissioners so they can relieve Congress of such minor administrative functions as authorizing construction of underground pipe lines or licensing physicians to practice the healing arts.

On Dangerous Weapons

Of the 14 bills approved by Congress last year the outstanding one remodeled and modernized the unemployment compensation law to the benefit of both employers and employes. The other principal legislation enacted into law forbade the carrying of any deadly or dangerous weapon capable of being concealed; increased by $300 a year until June 30 this year the pay of school teachers, police and firemen; eliminated assessments against property for street improvements; authorized an increase in the work week of women engaged in essential war activities from 48 to 54 hours with time and a half pay for the six additional hours, and granted pay increases to the Recorder of Deeds and the superintendent of the National Training School for Girls.

The House, on its return, will have only one District bill on its calendar, ready for consideration. It is the highly explosive measure which seeks to solve the century-old controversy over the District Virginia boundary.

The Senate likewise has only one District bill ready for its action—a measure passed by the House November 30 authorizing the Mayflower Hotel to construct pipe lines for steam heating purposes.

By far, House District subcommittees have more legislation assigned to them than those of the Senate District subcommittees. Altogether, the House groups have all but 24 of the 69 bills that have not yet been reported. The House judiciary subcommittee headed by Representative McGehee (Democrat) of Mississippi, alone has 18 bills before it, eight of which it shelved temporarily at the last session of Congress. Typical of these sidetracked measures are those intended to limit the size of rock fish sold in the District and to prohibit experiments on living dogs.

Army WASP Pilots Set Safety Record

A new safety record in military flying has been set by the WASPS, the civilian women pilots with the Army Air Forces who recently rounded out their first year of activity.

They flew the equivalent of three million miles for each fatal accident, the War Department disclosed yesterday. Their present rate is .05 fatal accidents for each 1000 hours of flying while the overall fatality rate in the United States for the air forces is .07.

There now are 900 WASPS in the service. Their chief is Miss Jacqueline Cochran.

D. A. Watson Seeks Senate Nomination

Chicago, Jan. 4 (AP).—Deneen A. Watson, who served as chairman of the Republican Postwar Policy Association, entered the contest for his party's United States senatorial nomination today on a platform advocating American cooperation in founding a world organization to check aggression.

Watson, whose group was placed on an inactive basis last fall after Republican leaders at Mackinac Island called for United States participation in an organization of sovereign nations to preserve peace, will oppose Richard J. Lyons, entrant backed by the Republican State organization headed by Gov. Dwight H. Green.

'Give Out' Asks Injunction In Varga Girl 'Preview' Suit

A preview to the Varga girl show—or is a free press personified by a semiclad beauty?—was presented in District Court yesterday when publishers of a song magazine for servicemen entitled "Give Out" asked that Postmaster General Frank C. Walker be prevented from taking away its second-class mailing privileges.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough took the "Give Out" case under advisement, saying it would probably be disposed of today.

However, he refused to entertain the free press issue. He said the right of the Postmaster General to control what printed matter could travel via the mails had been affirmed by the United States Supreme Court, a much higher tribunal.

"Give Out" is a book with a leggy majorette on the cover and songs from "Mademoiselle from Armentiers" to "Dirty Gertie from Bizerte." Both versions are not of the original strong vintage, however. Interspersed are such pieces as "Taps" and "As the Caissons Go Rolling Along."

Attorney Edmund Campbell contended Esquire, if anything, had more so-called objectionable features than the song book. He said the Postmaster General was exceeding his duty in that the magazine would be considered by any reasonable group of men as definitely not obscene.

Assistant United States Attorney Daniel B. Maher contended the ruling of the Postmaster General involved a matter of judgment on his part, and the court should not disturb his edict.

This case is the first of a series expected to be heard in District Court this month. The Esquire action is expected to be filed here later in the week.

Those pending are: the Consumers Union of New York, seeking restoration of mailing privileges for a pamphlet on contraceptives and one brought by the Institute of Family Relations on scientific theories on marriage relationships.

Bide Dudley

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—Bide Dudley, 66, playwright, author and newspaperman, died here today after a long illness.

Dr. Martin Kutscher said Mr. Dudley, father of Doris Dudley Jenkins, screen and stage actress, and Bronson Dudley, became ill 16 months ago. He worked on newspapers in Kansas City and Denver before coming to New York. He also was dramatic critic for radio station WOR.

Dr. Emily Bateman

Funeral services for Dr. Emily Elizabeth Bateman, 93, a resident of the District for 60 years, will be held at 1 p. m. tomorrow at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw., with burial in Fort Lincoln Cemetery. Dr. Bateman died Sunday of injuries received when she was struck by a streetcar on Thanksgiving Day.

A teacher in the Baltimore schools before she moved to the District, she was the author of Dulaney's Primer and First Reader. For many years this volume was used in the beginner grades in Baltimore.

In the District, she was an active member of the Wheel of Progress, an organization devoted to educational affairs. At the time of her death, she was serving as chaplain of the club. She made her home in recent years at 2305 Pennsylvania ave. nw. There are no survivors.

Counsel For Congress

Congress could make no better new year's resolution than to accept the prescription offered to it by Senator Wallace H. White, jr., of Maine. At the present time, due to the illness of Senator McNary, Senator White is the acting leader of the Republican minority in the Senate. He speaks, therefore, as an official partisan. But his is a species of partisanship which entails no conflict with patriotism. Reconciliation of the two is, at any time, a test of statesmanship. In time of war it is a moral imperative.

"There is a time to fight and a time to avoid fighting," said Senator White the other day. "At this time, with this accursed war on our backs, I think we should reduce points of friction to a minimum." Few will quarrel with a doctrine so self-evident. Friction, by its nature, is a retarding force—an obstruction to the effective action which prosecution of the war demands. But how avoid it when differences of opinion arise? Senator White has a homely approach to this. Separate essentials from nonessentials, he urges, and compromise on the latter, though never on the former.

It is the Republican leader's view that reasonable compromises can be worked out respecting the subsidy issue and the soldier vote issue, for example, without doing any violence to fundamental principles. If his colleagues will tackle these problems in the spirit he has recommended, the Senator is right. They have been wrestling over means; it is the ends which are essential. The recess will have been time well spent if it served to cool overheated tempers and to bring members of Congress back to Washington with a sense of perspective about their role in our tremendous national effort. There is a common enemy outside to be fought and beaten before we can spare precious time for fighting over nonessentials among ourselves.

Redcaps

The law moves sometimes in mysterious ways. Consider, for example, the case of 45 "redcaps" employed by the St. Paul Union Depot Co. who desired unanimously to have the United Transport Service Employees of America recognized as their collective bargaining agent. The National Mediation Board ruled that they must be represented by the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees. The "redcaps" objected to this, understandably, on the ground that the brotherhood denies them membership because they happen to be colored. They appealed to a Federal District Court which agreed with them and set aside the Mediation Board ruling. Then the brotherhood appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, which affirmed the court below it. Finally, the brotherhood took the case to the Supreme Court, which overruled the Circuit Court and upheld the Mediation Board ruling.

Laymen are likely to find it difficult to understand the Supreme Court's action. Whatever the legal intricacies of the case, an obvious injustice has been inflicted on the "redcaps." A union which discriminates against them and denies them any voice in its affairs is plainly an unsatisfactory bargaining agent for them. Chief Justice Groner of the Circuit Court of Appeals observed that to perpetuate such an arrangement by law "would be to impose a tyranny in many respects analogous to 'taxation without representation'." It would, he declared, "create an intolerable situation." The conclusion, so far as the merits of the matter are concerned, appears inescapable.

But undoubtedly the Supreme Court did not consider itself concerned with the wisdom or equity of the Mediation Board ruling. It was concerned with the important juridical principle established in previous cases that no Federal Courts may take jurisdiction over decisions of the Mediation Board in the field of representation disputes. Courts are not equipped to pass upon the tangled and sometimes technical issues of labor relations. These are better left to executive agencies versed in such problems. The function of the courts is simply to see to it that the agencies act within the limits of the Constitution and the authority granted to them by Congress. Apparently the Supreme Court felt that the Mediation Board had not exceeded its proper jurisdiction. It has been petitioned to grant a rehearing on the ground that the order violates the constitutional guarantee of due process. Perhaps it will do so.

Failing this, it remains for the Mediation Board itself to correct the "intolerable situation" it has created. For the sake of its own prestige and as a matter of elementary justice, it should do so at once. But the real and fundamental corrective can come only from the brotherhood, which has restricted its membership on a color basis. The restriction is antidemocratic and anti-American. It is time to stamp out racial discrimination wherever it exists among the labor organizations of the United States. Their function is to bulwark, not to bar, freedom of economic opportunity.

Free Air

Sooner or later it must be decided whether the constitutional guarantee of free speech applies to the radio. The question raises a dilemma scarcely foreseen by the authors of the Bill of Rights. One horn of the dilemma is that radio is a public utility engaged in interstate commerce and so subject to Federal regulation. The other horn is that this power of regulation can easily be employed by the Government in its own interest. Speaking before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce last month, Mr. Niles Trammell, president of the National Broadcasting Co., expressed a fear that broadcasting might become a Federal monopoly, "without Government owning a single share of stock in a radio station or having a single representative in corporate management." He asked that the FCC be prevented by law from exercising any control over radio programs. He also asked for various other revisions of the Communications Act which would tend to diminish or restrict the licensing powers of the commission.

What it all seems to boil down to is the question of whether radio is to continue on its present basis as a commercial enterprise deriving its main revenue from advertisers or whether it is to have a quasi-official status like the BBC. It seems to us that there is hardly any question that the radio, whether in public or private hands, is a monopolistic institution, and can hardly be otherwise. The number of radio stations or chains that can be operated simultaneously is limited by physical laws. Again, by its nature, the radio, it seems to us, lends itself more readily to propaganda than to the free, full and open discussion of all subjects. In the last analysis radio propaganda will be in favor of whoever pays the costs.

There are certain questions concerning which the commercial radio makes no pretense of offering both sides. So far as we can observe, for example, the various plugs in favor of the consumption of beer and of cigarettes, cigars and pipe tobacco are not offset by any comparable amount of time for rebuttal granted to the WCTU or to the Anti-Nicotine League. We are not, you must understand, complaining about this, but merely pointing out that as long as radio remains a commercial enterprise, the greater part of the broadcasting time will be devoted to one-sided propaganda to promote the sale of various manufactured products.

Mr. Trammell says that Government control of radio is "a pistol aimed at the heart of all our democratic freedom." If by this he means that sales propaganda, because easily identified as such, is much less dangerous than political propaganda, we should be inclined to agree. Of course, a commercial radio also means that a great many of the programs will be puerile, vulgar or downright idiotic, since they are chosen on the assumption that the volume of sales for the sponsor's product will be in direct ratio to the number of listeners. Here we have another instance of the operation of Gresham's law in modern society; the bad stuff driving the good off the air, or, at any rate, severely restricting it. Mr. Trammell, however, is evidently a bit touchy on this point. He speaks rather bitterly of those who try to disparage the "daytime serials" by giving them the opprobrious name of "soap operas," and says that three psychiatrists have studied the soap operas and approved them.

Still, whatever its banalities, the commercial radio seems the lesser evil, and its cause has been considerably strengthened by the asinine list of tabus attributed to the BBC. Moreover, it is not now compulsory to listen to the radio; but, once under Government control, there is no telling when it might become so.

In Poland Now

At one or several points along the Eastern Front the Red Army is now encamped on what was Polish soil prior to 1939. But no mention of that fact is to be found in the communiques of the Russian high command, in the commentaries published by the Soviet press, or in the broadcasts of the Russian radio. This is, of course, not surprising. The Russian position is—and Ambassador Oumansky of Mexico recently expounded it in public—that the areas liberated from the German yoke in the region west of Novograd-Volynski and Olevsk are not Polish but Russian, as Russian as the liberated regions to the east. This raises a problem which for some time has bedeviled Russo-Polish relations and may bedevil Russia's relations with other nations. Not that there is anything the United States could do in case the Russians decide that the western frontiers of Russia as fixed in the Molotoff-Ribbentrop agreement of 1939 should be the frontiers of postwar Russia. Yet at the same time the fact cannot be ignored that such unilateral boundary demarcations by Russia would be in violation of the spirit of the Declaration of the United Nations and of the letter of certain specific treaties which bear Russia's signature.

The latest of these treaties was that signed on July 30, 1941, eight days after the German assault on Soviet Russia, a treaty which contains the categorical statement that "the government of the Soviet Socialist Republics recognizes the Soviet-German treaties of 1939 as to territorial changes in Poland as having lost their validity." The corollary to that, of course, is the acceptance by Russia of the prewar status quo regarding the joint Russo-Polish frontier. It is also necessary to point out in this connection that Great Britain has taken a similar position. In a message to the late General Sikorski on the day the Soviet-Polish treaty was signed, Foreign Secretary Eden declared that "His Majesty's government do not recognize any territorial changes which have been effected in Poland since August 7, 1939." The United States is similarly committed.

It has been argued, of course, that there is nothing sacrosanct about Poland's prewar frontiers, that as a result of the way they were drawn a large number of non-Poles were included within the borders of that nation. That fact is incontrovertible. But if there are to be any revisions, as Russia apparently insists, such revisions should be the result of mutual agreement. To bring the disputants together, and, if asked, to serve as the arbitrator of their differences, may be all that the United States can do.

Agenda For OWI

Palmer Hoyt brought to the Office of War Information a clear and very simple concept of its responsibility—to see to it that the American people get the full story of the war. In his swan song as director of the agency's domestic branch, he said to the sales executive group in New York last week that "all America needs is the facts about the war on both the military and civil fronts to share it completely as a nation and as individuals who go to make up that nation. The American people need more, and need now, facts and not philosophy. They need stories of action as grim and as realistic as war itself, and not preachment and lectures."

In his brief tour of duty here, Mr. Hoyt has worked energetically—and with some measure of success—to give the country reporting of this sort. The stories from Tarawa indicate at least a liberalization of the Navy's news policy. And the Army has been induced to recognize that the American people have a legitimate interest in casualties, though the Army's disingenuousness over the Patton incident was a disturbing reminder of how broadly it still tends to interpret the term, "military security." We shall have to wait and see how liberally the censors in uniform handle the problem of information concerning the projected cross-channel invasion. At any rate, Mr. Hoyt can go home with the satisfaction of having started the ball rolling in an extremely useful direction.

But the job is by no means completed. Confusion still surrounds the activities of agencies on the home front. We are now more than ever in need of clarification as to policies in the economic sphere—production cutbacks, utilization of manpower, the stabilization program. Here, too, Army and Navy procurement officials tend to indulge in a mysterious secrecy. They might better acknowledge openly that changes in the pattern of the war have required changes in their scheduling of requirements. No one expects them to have been clairvoyant.

Above all, OWI still needs to bring about coherence in Government information. As Mr. Hoyt noted in his New York speech, and as recent occurrences have made all too clear, we are still getting contradictory "preachments" from high Government officials—too often behind the mask of anonymity. They remain prone to consider themselves guardians of our morale, if not of our morals, and to adminster exhortations and admonitions, praise and censure from on high.

Ramirez Regime

It is hardly surprising that while the other republics were deliberating what common action they should take regarding the new Bolivian government, the Ramirez regime in Argentina should have rushed in to extend diplomatic recognition to the revolutionary junta at La Paz. This is of a piece with the policy which the Argentine government under its present rules has consistently pursued from the beginning. It has been antidemocratic, pro-Axis, anti-American. It has established in this hemisphere and at a time when the Nazi sun is setting in Europe the nearest thing to a Nazi regime in the New World.

This latest action by Ramirez and his cohorts cannot be allowed to go either unnoted or unanswered. The United States has exercised the patience of Job toward Argentina in the two years since Pearl Harbor. Washington has hoped against hope that the Buenos Aires regime would see the light, would live up to its pledges of hemisphere solidarity, would cease being obstructionist. Nothing of the kind has happened.

On the contrary, our patience has been interpreted by the militarists at Buenos Aires as weakness. This latest insult is the inevitable sequel to what has gone before. Certainly the time has come to quit shilly-shallying with Hitler's Argentine imitators. In company with the Allies and the other American republics, in other words, we should break relations with a regime that stands for the opposite of everything we are fighting for. If Argentina wants to be isolated, let's make that isolation complete.

MORNING AFTER BLOW

All the barn doors are drifted shut.
Over each clapboard like a veil of froth
The fine snow clings; on the east side
A long bank like a mountain range
Runs a sharp zigzag half to the eaves,
And down its inner wall a rat's track runs.

I shovel free the stable door. Inside the barn
The warm air of so much breathing life
Rushes above my head seeking an exit.
The cows struggle to their feet; the horses
Neigh for food and stamp at the stable floor.
Over the west wall little fans of white
Spread from each tiny hole or crack.
The sheep move to the feed racks.
The black pig squealing climbs his pen side.
And through the opened stable door
The red sun like a railroad danger signal
Juts from the valley wall and sweeps its light
Like furnace glow over the silk white fields.

Strikes Real Issue

TO UNDERSTAND the ending, let us tell this serially climaxing story from the beginning.

Our Army staff maintains close and continuous information about conditions inside Germany, including the state of mind of the German people. It does this by means of its regular intelligence services, supplemented by special agencies set up since the war began. What our agencies learn is pooled in close cooperation with the extremely thorough underground service of the Russian government, and the long-standing, exceptionally equipped services of the British government.

What these agencies learn is not for the public. The public knows little of this work. But the Army studies it intently and has at all times accurate, up-to-the-minute knowledge of the morale of the Axis peoples. The Army's knowledge of enemy morale is as thorough and minute as its knowledge of the disposition of enemy troops and other military matters.

From its information the Army believed recently that there might be a crackup of the German people, or more likely of the satellite peoples, some time fairly soon, perhaps during February.

AT THIS point certain things happened in the United States—a threatened railroad strike, followed by the taking over of the railroads by the Government; and a threatened strike in the steel industry.

These incidents in America changed the view of the Army about the probability of crack-up within the Axis. The Army did not need to wait to get reports of the change through its intelligence services. The Army knew that the strikes in America would be exploited by the German propaganda machine—to make their people see there would be a slow-up of the American war effort, possibly leading to a state of mind in America which would look tolerantly on a negotiated peace. In view of this development in Germany, our Army changed its view about the likelihood of an early crack-up within the Axis.

In this situation a high Army official in Washington called a conference with newsmen and told them the essence of what is here recited. The Army official did this not as a matter of repining—it is not the Army's way to wail over spilt milk. The Army official's purpose was to forestall future misadventure of the same sort. The Army official knew, like everyone in Washington, that other strikes are brewing. The Army official presumably hoped to avert these strikes—and thereby permit possible crack-up of German morale to develop once more, without interruption by news of strikes in America.

UPON PUBLICATION of what the Army official had said, without use of his name, uproar began. Some of it had to do with newspaper ethics and official ethics—saying that officials ought not to give out such statements anonymously, and that newspapers ought not to print them anonymously. This part of the uproar amounts to exactly nothing at all. Anonymous information is given out, with much usefulness, by every official in Washington, from the President down, and is usefully printed by newspapers, according to their discretion.

The real cause of the uproar is not the method by which the information was given to the public—it is the information itself, the indisputable factuality of it. The facts rest squarely on the shoulders of the labor leaders. One of these, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, gave out a statement of angry defense and defiance. Mr. Green said the anonymous official was Gen. George C. Marshall—who is the highest authority in the Army.

But it is not General Marshall who is at issue—it is the strikes. What will be done about them constitutes the next development—whether labor leaders will go on with strikes, whether the Administration will change its policy about strikes.

Flu And Lifts

If you could call the attention of your readers who have cars to the miserable plight of those of us who wait and wait for buses it would be a kindness. There is influenza in Washington, and many people get it because they are chilled through waiting for buses. I have waited 30 minutes, with two dozen others, on a cold, dark, wet, windy morning and seen car after car with only the driver in it stop for traffic lights near us, and go comfortably on, leaving us waiting for a bus or taxi that could take a few in.

The courtesy of bus drivers and motormen is unfailing. In six months since I came to Washington I have never seen one fail to try to help passengers. But the drivers of private cars apparently do not care whether we warworkers do our job or not. Many of us left good positions to come here, solely because we want to help win the war. It is hard to understand why people with cars can't at least give a lift when they have to stop for traffic lights. I am not even suggesting that they stop on purpose.

Four-Power Alliance

By Sumner Welles

Orderly And Peaceful World

THE CATEGORICAL statement made by the President in his Christmas Eve address, that the four major powers "must be united with and cooperate with the freedom-loving peoples of Europe and Asia and Africa and the Americas, the rights of every nation, large and small, must be respected and guarded as jealously as are the rights of every individual within our own republic," will do much to check a singularly confused kind of thinking which has made headway in this country in the last few months.

The spokesmen for this school of thought style themselves "hard-boiled realists."

The clearest illustration I can offer of the type of thinking to which I refer is by taking as an example a signed editorial which appeared a few days ago in a leading newspaper.

In this editorial the writer asserted that the people of this country cared nothing about Pan-Americanism, the principles of the League of Nations, nor any other such "experimental Utopias" in the realm of international cooperation. He compared the world of the future to the frontier days of our own history when stockades had to be built around every settlement, and declared that the four great powers, which by their armed strength will make possible the winning of this war, must through a postwar military alliance provide a stockade within which other nations may enjoy such security as the four great powers will permit them to possess.

Another aspect of the same philosophy can be found in the demand which frequently finds its way into print that the United States must keep for itself the islands of the Caribbean or of the Pacific, or the ports on the other side of the Atlantic, now belonging to other members of the United Nations, where we have established military or naval bases for our joint wartime needs, and that we must exercise our exclusive sovereignty in the future over the air bases which we have constructed, with our Allies' consent, in territory belonging to them.

THE HOLDERS of these views undoubtedly have as their ultimate objectives exactly the same objectives as all the rest of us.

We all of us want safety for this country and its sovereign institutions in the years to come; security for our children and for our children's children; and we want it at the minimum cost in lives of future Americans and with the least possible expense to the taxpayer.

The question is solely whether the policies urged by these self-styled "realists" are going to accomplish any of these ends. In my judgment they would do precisely the contrary.

Even the briefest analysis of these doctrines is sufficient to prove that the spokesmen for them are only preaching a new form of isolation. They demand that we embark upon a policy of frank imperialism. They display vigorous contempt for any form of peaceful international cooperation, even where, as in the case of pan-Americanism, it has proved eminently successful and of great practical value to the United States.

THE MILITARY alliance of the United States, Great Britain, the Soviet Union and China is indispensable to win the war. It is equally indispensable to prevent chaos in that transition period between the unconditional surrender of the Axis and the creation of a permanent international organization.

With the military decisions which the four powers may find it necessary to take for these purposes other members of the United Nations must not interfere. The major powers should be able freely to carry out these responsibilities.

The danger lies in the concept that this is all that will ever be required to insure an orderly and a peaceful world.

Is it likely in the present instance, if our "realists" had their way, and this country undertook to assert the right to have only the American flag fly over strategic outposts throughout the world, that the other three great powers would not assert similar rights? Would not a military alliance based upon such conflicting policies as these bear within it the seeds of its rapid disintegration? Must not certain strategic bases be available in each region to all of the powers of that region to which organized international society delegates the task of preventing the outbreak of war?

In order to assure the close cooperation of the great powers in the future as in the past, far more is needed than the military alliance between them, essential as this is. There is also needed the establishment, during the breathing space which this alliance will bring about after the victory, of those permanent international institutions through which all peoples, including those of the great powers, can peacefully settle their differences and find satisfaction for their just requirements.

EVERY MILITARY alliance known to history has sooner or later broken down as the policies and ambitions of its individual members have changed. Only through the adjustment of the armed might which it controls to the requirements of international law, as decided upon by an organization of the free, peace-loving peoples of the world, can there be any hope that such an alliance might prove lasting.

International justice and international security can never be found in any permanent sense through the mere dictates of four dominant military powers.

The President could not have phrased it more cogently and more wisely when he said: "The doctrine that the strong shall dominate the weak is the doctrine of our enemies—and we reject it."

True "realism" on our part lies in apprehending clearly that our ability to keep the United States in safety in the future lies in our capacity to bring about the creation of a world order ruled by law in which all law-abiding countries may participate, in whose authority free and sovereign peoples will wish to acquiesce, and under which certain powers will by common agreement make force available to a world organization in order to prevent lawbreakers from being able to injure peaceful members of the family of nations.

Rail And Steel Strikes

Here's one reader who's fed up with the current blaming of everything on labor. It takes at least two to make a strike. And since the armed forces aren't infants, it's time they learned a few facts of industrial life.

If the "high figure" making his gloomy pronouncements had any truth behind his assertions, as well as any guts, he'd come out openly with the alleged facts and figures rather than hiding behind anonymity. DISGUSTED.

Washington, Jan. 1.

The article entitled "Rail, Steel Disputes Seen Prolonging War—Piling Up Casualties," which was featured on the front page of The Post on January 1, was a most excellent one and I have but one comment to make concerning it.

In one of the paragraphs it stated: "Such was the situation outlined by the speaker and it was urged that it be driven home to the people of America—especially to the wives and mothers of servicemen—so that they may better pass judgment on things that are to come in 1944."

I should like to suggest that the general public of these United States is heartily sick and tired of everlasting labor disputes, bitterly angry not only at the lack of patriotism shown by the union leaders but by the strikers themselves and completely disgusted by the feeble, evasive handling of such vital matters by a politically minded Administration, which, at this time, should be thinking of the country and not of a few votes.

I feel, I hope rightly, that it is unnecessary for the danger of such things "to be driven home to the people of America, especially to the wives and mothers of servicemen."

To the vast majority it has been obvious for a long time past.

Those to whom it should be driven home are the leaders of Government and the lawmakers of the land that they may take steps to right an intolerable and shameful condition.

"Little Old Lady"

Fully hoping, with these few lines, to bring to the "Little Old Lady," my many, many thanks for an excellent and timely Christmas gift.

I wish you to know that upon returning from my tour of duty, at this air base to my hut, after plowing around in knee-deep mud all day, I was down in the dumps, to use an expression. Following mail-call, and receipt of a bundle from an unknown donor, I was greatly cheered. Upon opening and reading your clipping, I realized what I was fighting for, and it was not bad at all. People like her at home make it much simpler for people such as myself over here.

I would wish personally to thank her, but as you say, she wishes to remain secretive, but she can feel that one soldier is appreciative of the good done by those folk at home.

Wishing for a joyous Christmas, and bountiful New Year to the "Little Old Lady," also the best to your staff for their thoughtfulness, I remain, a thankful and happier soldier.

Italian Prisoners

Through the wide influence of your paper you could without doubt give great assistance in helping to solve the urgent problem of "help" in the home. There are still, I believe, many Italians in prison camps in this country and both they and we could be greatly benefited could arrangements be made to give them an opportunity to earn a good living as chauffeurs, gardeners, houseboys, cooks and valets.

Employers would find in the Italian one who brings joy and charming atmosphere of thoughtfulness and kindness with him into the home where he works.

I feel it a privilege to have had their faithful service for more than 20 years and no praise can be too high for their efficiency and devotion. NANCY HUNTINGTON.

The White Collared

By Malvina Lindsay

Their Day In Court

(Hearings on the plight of white-collar workers, whose salaries remain fixed while prices and taxes mount, will be held by the Senate Committee on Labor and Education, January 25-27.)

WE ARE the 15,000,000 white collar men and women, the clerks, secretaries, teachers, salesmen, municipal workers and professional people who have no lobbyists, organizers or publicity men to speak for us. We have long been neglected, disparaged, ridiculed. Our symbols are the little man who is always being pushed around, the office girl laundering and pressing in a community bathroom, the cultural yearner leaning out of a top balcony at a concert.

Yet we have nothing for which to apologize. We have a long and proud tradition. Originally the word "clerk" was a title of honor bestowed on those engaged in church duties. In earlier, less literate ages, our ability to write gave us distinction. Even through later years we have had a literary heritage of pride—Charles Lamb clerking for 33 years in an accountant's office while giving the world his famous essays; Samuel Pepys spending his life as secretary, clerk, hardworking public servant, simultaneously writing his six-volume diary; the young Charles Dickens struggling as a court reporter and later creating a world of white collar characters including Scrooge's immortal clerk, Bob Cratchit; Nathaniel Hawthorne measuring coal in the Boston customs house; Charlotte Bronte slaving as teacher and governess to support her family; Walt Whitman working for ten years as a government clerk in Washington and writing one of his greatest poems, "When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloom'd."

Modern Knights

We have had great representatives in every walk of life, and we now have our heroes at the battlefront. Look among the records of those invincible men who led the advance up Hill 609 in Tunisia and you will find listed after many names "former shoe salesman," "former tax clerk," "former stock clerk." Look at the records of others who at Salerno, Tarawa and elsewhere have shown the gallantry and the high disdain of death of medieval knights, and you will find their peacetime occupations listed as clerks, salesmen, bookkeepers, office workers, bank helpers, etc. Also we have had our heroes and heroines at home, the selfless Miss Matties who as school teachers have influenced millions of lives, the conscientious John Does who have faithfully given their years to serve the city or State in small jobs on whose smooth functioning so much has depended; the nurses and welfare workers who have spent themselves for others.

We have never had money—possibly because we did not love is enough. But always we have had inspiration. We have been the main patrons of the public libraries; we have filled the balconies of theaters; we have thronged to art exhibits; we have been the bulwark of church congregations; we have joined civic organizations and faithfully appeared on election day at the ballot boxes; we have gone to night classes and taken correspondence courses; we have pinched and sacrificed to put our children through high school and college and thus to supply to the world its clergymen, professors, scientists, lawyers, doctors, statesmen, writers and others who have kept the life of the mind expanding and advancing.

Gentility's Last Stand

We have kept alive gentility, which to us means not an ineffectual refinement, but rather gentle manners, grace of spirit and an esthetic pride in appearance and surroundings. We have sustained convention, which to us means not the snobbery of Mrs. Grundy, but orderly and just relations with others. We have conserved our racial tradition of middle-of-the-road thought and action, which has made us a sane and moderating force in America. If we have not been aggressive, neither have we been ruthless, slick, or bulldozing. We have respected the other fellow, his rights and his reachings. We have been preeminently democrats and preeminently individualists.

We have been the cogs in the wheels of industry, the Government and of war—and we still are. We keep the books, write the letters, file the papers, answer the telephones, send the messages, open the schools, the stores and the offices, tie things together both here and over there. But we are not brandishing our importance or our power. We are not ganging up and threatening in pursuit of our "rights." Neither are we indulging in self-pity. But we are asking that Congress and the Nation stop and appraise our value. We are important in the war emergency. We will be more important in the feverish adjustments of peace.

Tomorrow's world, we are told, will be a mechanized one. Increasingly men and women will throw off their white collars to take advantage of the opportunities and monetary rewards of industry. Yet—teachers, librarians, clerks, secretaries, artists, writers will still be needed. Above all, the viewpoint and aspirations of the class they represent will be needed. No democracy can preserve and expand its traditions without the mental force of its white collared. Not alone for ourselves, but for America must we be sustained.

Russia And Poland

By Ernest Lindley

Possible Reconciliation

THE POLISH underground's categorical rejection of a German bid to join in fighting the advancing Russians has lessened one of Washington's fears. The Polish government in exile has instructed the underground to give the Russians active support, providing they prove "friendly." The stipulation is not further defined. But if active military collaboration develops, a basis might be laid for a serious Anglo-American effort to persuade Russia to rerecognize the exiled government. Until now, the Moscow atmosphere has discouraged the attempt.

LINDLEY

The rival Union of Polish Patriots, under Moscow's auspices, has persistently denounced the exiled government as "reactionary," probably because of that government's refusal to accept Russia's claim to eastern Poland, based on the partition of 1939. However, seven of the thirteen members of the cabinet are leftists. The prime minister, Stanislaw Mikolajozyk, is an agrarian socialist. The deputy prime minister, Ja. Kwapinski, spent ten years in Siberian servitude in the last Czarist regime, and the prewar Polish "colonels' government" also threatened him for agitating socialist reforms. Rightists are included to gain support from all elements of Polish life.

THE GOVERNMENT approaches military collaboration with some misgivings, however. It has advised underground leaders to stay incognito in dealing with the Russians and under no circumstances to run the risk of becoming hostages. Polish circles still remember the Russian executions of the Polish socialists, Alter and Ehrlich, for asserted sabotage. Reciprocal suspicions may yet flare up in strife.

Yet the Poles certainly wish normal relations restored. That step would quiet their anxiety that the Patriots, with Russian backing, will claim Allied recognition as the legitimate Polish regime, as Tito has done in Yugoslavia.

The anxiety is not without cause. In addition to a newspaper and radio station, Moscow has now provided the Patriots with an "army," comprising two divisions of Polish volunteers, one of which has recently taken the field under the Polish flag.

The Patriots are led politically by Wanda Wasilewska, a Polish communist, wife of a Soviet vice commissar. They accept and defend Russia's territorial claims, whereas the exiled government, as trustee of Polish interests, say it cannot endorse them without a national referendum. The disputed Eastern Galicia area holds much of the agriculture, minerals and industry on which Polish economy depends.

The Patriots charge that the Polish government does not represent the Polish people. In refutation, the government cites its close collaboration with the Polish underground, which is democratically organized. It cites also the failure of German efforts to set up a Polish Quisling regime.

THE UNDERGROUND is divided into a military organization, controlled by the exiled government, and a civilian administration, which is largely autonomous.

Estrangement from the Allies over strategy, a development now manifest in the case of Yugoslav General Mihailovitch, is minimized in the Polish instance; copies of all military orders go to the combined chiefs of staff. Resistance thus far has been limited mostly to sabotage, but the saboteurs provide cadres to which reservists can report when the military situation warrants organized guerilla war.

The civil underground conducts schools, executes traitors and occasional Germans, and supplies the saboteurs with weapons and refuge. It makes recommendations on proposed cabinet changes in London and, in turn, submits new appointments to the higher underground offices.

Whatever future advantage Russia expects from the Government-Patriot feud, the Germans have been the only gainers thus far. Goebbels constantly cites Russian treatment of the exiled government in his exhortations to Germany's satellites to hold the anti-Bolshevist Line.

Having annexed the territories east of the Molotov-Ribbentrop Line, Russia apparently regards the boundary issue as settled. In due course, the Poles may have to accept Moscow's verdict. But by its instructions to the underground to aid the Russian armies, the government in exile has earned a respite from Patriot attacks. London and Washington hope that Moscow will react favorably, opening the way for Russian-Polish reconciliation.

Drop Is Shown in Number Who Think Draft Is Handled Fairly; Majority Still Large

By GEORGE GALLUP,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 4.—Although the American public gives the Selective Service draft boards a high vote of confidence, the number of people who think the boards are handling the draft fairly has decreased in recent months as the draft has cut deeper and deeper into the available male population.

The chief public criticism today, and one which accounts for a large part of the shift in sentiment, has to do with the drafting of fathers. In spite of these grumblings, however, three persons in every four continue to feel that the draft is being handled fairly.

At periodic intervals since the draft began late in 1940, the Institute has tested public sentiment on the following issue:

"Do you think the draft is being handled fairly in your community?"

The trend:

	Yes	No
May, 1941	93%	7%
May, 1942	88	12
November, 1942	82	18
Today	75	25

It can be seen that the decline in the affirmative vote has closely paralleled the expansion of the draft to include more and more men, particularly of late the pre-Pearl Harbor fathers.

The main objection given by the 25 per cent who feel that the draft has not been handled fairly is that too many fathers are being inducted ahead of single men and ahead of unmarried defense workers whose places could be taken by women. Their second main criticism is that the boards are not thorough enough in considering the problems of inductees and often make decisions too hastily and arbitrarily. Other criticisms, voiced by comparatively small numbers, are that too many older men are being drafted while younger men are still around, that too many farm boys are being taken, and that some of the boards show favoritism.

No significant differences of attitude toward the draft were found by age groups or by size of community. Nor is there much difference between the opinions of men and women, as the following table shows:

	Yes	No
Men	77%	23%
Women	74	26

Rarely at any time in eight years of public opinion sampling has the Institute ever found a Government agency or bureau receiving such a large and sustained vote of confidence as is given the members of the draft boards who, serving without pay, handle one of the toughest jobs on the home front.

Draft Evasions Fewer Than in Last War

Baltimore, Jan. 4 (AP).—If the draft conviction record is an accurate indicator, Selective Service is much more successful in this war than it was in World War I.

A survey of Federal Court records disclosed that only 37 men had been convicted in Maryland of violations in more than three years of World War II's draft program, in the last war, when mandatory military service lasted about 18 months, there were 80 convictions.

BLOOD PLASMA

A letter came from North Africa several months ago, written by a worker in the American Field Service. It said, in part, "Our great fear always is 'Will there be enough blood?' Our plea is that you at home do not stop at two pints, or three, but that you keep it flowing 'til it's over over here." Hundreds of letters from the front tell of the miracles accomplished by blood plasma. One pint of your blood may be all that's needed to save some boy's life. Will you do this for them? Woman Asks Citizenship After 45 Years

A proud old lady bowed slightly yesterday before Justice David A. Pine in District Court and then stood erect to obtain her citizenship.

The naturalization officer recited that she came here from Germany in 1899 and worked since that time as maid for a woman who is now 100 years old.

The applicant was Miss Afra Bleicher, 64, employed by Mrs. Robert R. Hitt of 1501 New Hampshire ave. nw.

"Do you mean to say she came here in 1899 and didn't care to apply for citizenship until 1940, when war was imminent?" asked the justice.

Miss Bleicher interrupted. "I work all the time. My lady is an invalid."

Justice Pine scrutinized her record and said, "Let her be admitted."

Eighty Become Citizens

This is one of 89 cases heard yesterday. Or these, 80 were admitted.

Justice Pine criticized the naturalization bureau for not asking applicants why they waited so long before attempting to become citizens. It was explained to him that under the law any person can ask for citizenship at any time, but Justice Pine replied that this does not mean that citizenship is to be handed out "on a silver platter."

He continued the cases of eight persons who did not appear, stating if they couldn't show an adequate reason for their absence, he would take "appropriate action" to see their cases are disposed of.

Another granted citizenship was Bohdan Comte de Castellane, who renounced his French count title.

Rickenbacker Calls Marshall Presidential Type

Boston, Jan. 4 (AP).—Col. Edward Rickenbacker told the Boston Advertising Club today he considered Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the Army, as "the type of man who should be President" of the United States.

The flier, commenting on "a high source" in Washington who declared recently that labor's strike activities had hurt the war effort, said Marshall had been named as the person responsible for the statement, adding that, if so: "Thank God for men like Marshall, whose main thought is saving the lives of your boys and mine."

Rickenbacker said "the next President should be a man of Marshall's type who would add a fifth freedom to the Atlantic Charter—the freedom of opportunity."

Georgia Legislature Passes Servicemen's Vote Measure

Atlanta, Jan. 4 (AP).—Legislation to facilitate absentee voting by 250,000 Georgians in the armed forces was approved unanimously today by House and Senate Committees at a special session of the General Assembly.

Several amendments, mostly of a minor nature, are to be incorporated in the measure before it is brought up for passage tomorrow.

Connecticut Call Out.

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 4 (AP).—Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin today issued a proclamation calling the Legislature into special session January 24.

Chief among the emergencies cited as requiring action was a need for amendment of the absentee voting law to simplify voting by men nad women in the armed forces and an extension of the voting hours, which are now from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m., to make it easier for warworkers.

Opposes U.S. Action

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 4 (AP).—Gov. Charles Edison said today it was "wrong for the Federal Government to supersede the States" in the handling of absentee military voting, and proposed what he termed an "easy and thoroughly practical manner" for the States to do the job.

Edison asked that the New Jersey Legislature memorialize Congress to provide for the Secretaries of War and Navy to deliver identical post cards to members of the services by which they could register in their home States to vote for Federal, State and local officials.

After enactment of such Federal legislation, he said, the State should enact new procedure for providing secret ballots for the service voters.

Expediting transmittal of the cards and ballots to and from the voters, Edison stated, "in general, should be the extent of Federal participation."

Saltonstall to Act

Boston, Jan. 4 (AP).—Gov. Leverett Saltonstall announced today that he would ask the State Supreme Court to determine whether, under his war emergency powers, he had authority to change primary and election dates to permit absentee voting by members of the armed forces.

The chief executive made the announcement after his attention had been called to the fact that the Rhode Island and Connecticut Legislatures would be asked to act.

Fairbank to Head 4th Bond Drive Dental Section

Dr. Leigh C. Fairbank, retired brigadier general who entered the Army Dental Corps in 1914 as a contract dentist, has accepted the post fo chairman of the dental section for the Fourth War Loan drive, Dr. W. Calhoun Stirling, chairman of the professional division of the D. C. War Finance Committee, reported yesterday.

Dr. Frank, who advanced to the status of brigadier general in 1938, was the first U. S. Army dental officer ever to attain the rank of general. From 1938 until his retirement in 1942, when he entered the private practice of orthodontia here, he served as assistant surgeon general.

Early Mailing Urged For Service Valentines

Steps were taken by the War Department yesterday to make sure that each soldier in a jungle foxhole, or crouched in the freezing mud of an Italian mountain gully, will receive promptly his invitation to "be my valentine."

Emphasizing the beneficial effect on the morale of soldiers overseas when they get mail from home, the department officially cooperated with romance by formally urging wives and sweethearts to get their Valentine greetings into the mails before January 15. Valentine Day is February 14—one month and 10 days hence.

Caribbean Islands To Be Subject Of Conferences

Creation of a system of West Indian conferences to give the dependent peoples of British and American islands in the Caribbean a voice in deciding their social and economic future was announced yesterday by the Anglo-American Caribbean Commission.

It may serve as a model for other regional agencies expected to be set up in the postwar period. The British colonial office is known to be deeply interested in its successful development.

The regional conference also is an advisory body to be composed of both official and unofficial representatives and to make recommendations for commission action. The official members, in general, will speak for the British and American governments in the islands, and the unofficial members will represent the island peoples.

100 ROUND TRIPS TO THE MOON

Our Streetcars and Buses traveled a total of over 50-Million Miles in 1943. That's the equivalent of more than 100 Round Trips to the Moon . . . over 2-Thousand Trips around the Earth—a lot of traveling in a single year.

They carried more than 500-Million Passengers—an average of over 10-Million Riders a Week — about 1½-Million Riders a Day. That's a good day's work in serving Washington . . . which serves the Nation. Think of the lag in the war effort if this City lacked mass transportation for war workers. And the effect on property values, without the lifeline of Streetcars and Buses.

To do the job Capital Transit worked night and day to keep in running order its hundreds of Cars and Buses—the largest single privately owned and operated fleet of any city in the United States.

To be in "running order" means more than mechanical fitness. Each vehicle calls for manpower, as well. And to maintain our operating force in the face of a loss of 800 trained men to the War, is a big story of accomplishment itself.

TRUTH vs. TREASON

On New Year's Day the newspapers published a charge tantamount to treason directed against the workers of America. The charge was attributed to a "high official source," not otherwise identified. This anonymous spokesman declared at a secret press conference, according to The Washington Post, that the rail and steel industry disputes had prolonged the war by six months, thereby causing hundreds of thousands of needless casualties. It was stated that Hitler had exploited the labor situation in the United States to such a degree in propaganda broadcasts that resistance among the satellite nations had stiffened.

On the following day several newspapers identified the "high official source" as being Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the United States Army.

In the interests of the truth, we submit the following statements.

I.

"I address a message of sanity to the American people.

"The United Nations are winning this war. They are winning it primarily because America has won the battle of war production.

"The War Department assures me that the production picture was never better than it is now. The workers of our country have met and exceeded every production goal set for them in 1943. War materials are proceeding to every fighting front in surplus quantities and with record speed.

"Let me assure the American people that, so far as the members of the American Federation of Labor are concerned, there shall be no interruption of the march to victory in 1944. They have adhered faithfully to the no-strike pledge. They will continue to do so for the duration.

"We challenge General Marshall, or anyone else, to prove that the record of America's soldiers of production provides an effective propaganda weapon for the enemy. On the contrary, the fact is that American workers have silenced Hitler's propaganda guns and have shortened the war by turning out tremendous quantities of planes, ships, tanks, guns and ammunition in record time."

—William Green.

II.

"THE CHARGE THAT THE NAZIS EXPLOITED OUR STRIKE THREAT FOR PROPAGANDA IS A LITTLE PUZZLING. OF 2,372 NAZI OR NAZI-CONTROLLED BROADCASTS CHECKED BETWEEN DEC. 26 AND JAN. 2, ONLY 36 REFERRED TO THE STRIKE, AND OF THESE ONLY FOUR WERE GERMAN BROADCASTS.

"ACTUALLY, THE NAZIS DID TRY TO MAKE PROPAGANDA OUT OF THE STATEMENT WHICH THEY ATTRIBUTE TO GENERAL MARSHALL."

—William L. Shirer,
(Over CBS, Jan. 3, 1944)

III.

"As a matter of fact, in Hitler's New Year proclamation, a document of some 8,000 words, there is no reference to America's internal weaknesses. If that subject had any propaganda value it is strange that the Fuehrer ignored it.

"It is about time that those high officials who have anything to say stand up to be seen and heard. And it is about time that newspapers stop serving as the funnels of anonymous outpourings from no matter what high places or illustrious sources."

George Marshall Protests $500 League Fine

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Later this month, Judge Landis will call a committee of big league club owners to Chicago to undertake postwar planning for baseball, and we'd say the game needs it. Despite the solidity of baseball, there is room for improvement.

POVICH

They'll be remiss if they don't concern themselves with the fact that baseball is all but dead in the colleges and has been in a dying condition for years. There was a period when college baseball could be favorably compared with the high minors but it hasn't withstood the counter attractions of track, golf and tennis, spring sports, and spring football practice.

The two big leagues and the National Commission (Landis' office) have plenty of dough. Both leagues get a percentage of every game's gate receipts during the season and Landis' office cuts in heavily on the World Series. They have accumulated tremendous sinking funds. If they don't spend a bit of it to repopularize baseball in the colleges, by providing them with better coaches, perhaps, they won't be smart.

A college baseball coach is usually the worst-paid member of the campus athletic staff. Ordinarily he isn't much of a baseball man to start with. In many schools the job goes to him by default. He doesn't command a lot of respect nor can he teach the boys much. The big leagues could restore interest in baseball in the colleges by sloughing off their over-age players as coaches and helping to pay their salaries from a fund for that purpose.

Baseball is proud of its integrity and its place in American life, but it has not made too many strides toward solidifying itself. The big leagues have been too content with their success and increased attendance figures, and the glowing reports of how frenzied are the servicemen overseas to read and hear what goes on in baseball. In recent years the game has taken only one major step to improve its future.

That was the decision to subsidize the junior American Legion baseball program with a $25,000 outlay each year. It has paid big dividends and stimulated the game among sandlotters. The majors and high minors are full of Legion ball graduates and organized baseball is getting back many times the cost of the program.

But otherwise the baseball people have lacked enterprise. Only grudgingly did they consent to more night ball games, even though it was apparent that the working public preferred them. They shudder at any innovation.

When Landis discusses postwar problems with the owners, he will probably take up, too, the question, of the farm systems, or chain-store baseball as it is better known. He'll probably want to do something about that evil. Landis hasn't liked it from the start, but it has been hard to control.

Chain-store baseball, with one big league team controlling franchises in as many as a dozen smaller cities and towns, defeats small-town pride in its team. Landis has long preached that independent ownership of smaller teams is more healthy than corporation baseball. That's how the game began, with municipalities outdoing themselves to surpass each other in the skill of their ball teams.

Even the club owners who acknowledged the evils of chain store baseball were forced into it as a means of self-protection. They don't like it and would be willing to junk it, if Landis could find a way of making all the clubs conform. But teams like the Yankees, with big farms in Newark and Kansas City, and smaller clubs in Binghampton and other towns, have found their chain-stores too profitable and are in no mood to yield on the point.

Since the beginning of the war, baseball has made contributions that it would be stupid to abandon at the war's end. The game has won its way into the hearts of the servicemen by free admissions, donations for baseball equipment and special radio broadcasts. It has cooperated whole-heartedly in charity and war fund drives, and that has been nice.

But the baseball people will miss the boat if, after the war, they withdraw inside their proverbial shell and no longer regard their game as a community service. Any postwar planning should embrace a continued participation in charity drives and maintenance of baseball's place in popular programs.

Baseball has been sort of wonderful in its contributions since Pearl Harbor. It has upped player salaries and hasn't raised the price of admissions. The returning soldier who has been reading of the all-out cooperation of baseball in the war effort, wouldn't like to come back and find that his game is on a strictly business basis once more.

On the Line

With Bob Considine

New York, Jan. 4.—William G. Helis, the rich and patriotic Greek, named his $66,000 2-year-old colt yesterday. He named him Pericles, after the Athenian statesman by Xanthippus out of Agariste, and we trust that the expensive plug is able to overcome the jinx of his price tag and the excitement caused by his naming.

CONSIDINE

Some of the worst horses which ever stepped on loam cost the most. Back in 1928 a yearling named New Broom, by Whisk Broom II—Payment was bought by an oilman's syndicate for $75,000. New Broom succeeded only in sweeping his owners clean. W. R. Coe purchased Hustle On for $70,000 a year before that, and Hustle On never did. Helis' Pericles is the third highest priced thoroughbred ever sold at a yearling sale. He cost a thousand bucks more than the former owner of third place, Broadway Limited, by Man o' War out of Starflight. Broadway Limited was another notorious bust.

Pericles is a fine name for a Greek horse, but it is also fitting for the racing game. The politician after whom he was named was mixed up in a bribery case in 463 B. C., was tossed out of office in 430, charged with embezzlement, and fined 50 talents. We don't have the name of the bondsman handy, but will ask John Kieran the next time we see him.

Pericles is by Blenheim II (Whirlaway's pappy) out of Risk—which he certainly is. When Helis announced some time ago that he was looking for a good name for the fabulous yearling his office was flooded by suggestions—the best of which, we think, was our friend Tony Betts' contribution. "ony suggested Churchill, which name is, of course, connected with Blenheim through Churchill's famed ancestor the Duke of Marlborough, hero of the Battle of Blenheim. It could also be added that Churchill's maternal grandfather built Jerome Park, one of the greatest of the American racetracks of the gay '90's.

Eugenically, the perfect beastie of our time was bred a few years ago in Kentucky when Top Flight, best 2-year-old filly in American racing history, dropped a colt by Man o' War, the best colt. To add to its luster, the colt was born on Derby Day, and was owned by C. V. Whitney, then and now one of the finest names in racing.

When it came time for the colt to be given a name there was a great to-do. The New York World Telegram ran a contest and received many nominations, most of them war-like. It was finally agreed to call him Sky Raider, which name got past the sharp scrutiny of Fred Klees, a dour gent who sits in his office at the Jockey Club and approves or disapproves of thoroughbred names. He usually disapproves, for he has a horror of ever letting either a commercial aspect or double entendre creep into thoroughbred names—though the wiser owners have occasionally fooled the old man. Ethel Mars, the candy maker, was for instance given permission to name her stable the Milky Way Farms. The rich and lusty Army phrase, Snafu, also passed Klees along with a number of others.

The trouble with Sky Raider was that he turned out to be the black sheep, or goat, in the short-lived family of Man o' War and Top Flight. He had a slight touch of Leon Errol in his pins, and though he tried hard he just was no account.

We've always been of the opinion that great horses and great athletes almost invariably have great names. There is a rival school, given to writing snarling letters, which contends that the horses and the athletes themselves made their names great, but we scoff at that. Man o' War simply had to be a great horse, as did Twenty Grand, Cavalcade, Whirlaway, Blue Larkspur, American Flag, National Anthem (by American Flag out of Golden Melody), War Admiral, Equipoise, Gallant Fox, Discovery, Black Gold, Top Flight and many others. We grant that Exterminator might have been an exception, though he go. his name honorably enough. Cal Milam, who bred wonderful Old Bones, told Mrs. Milam, the day he named him, that he had called him Exterminator because he figured that he'd exterminate all opposition, and he did.

Anybody named Ty Cobb could not possibly have been mediocre, and that goes for Babe Ruth. An athlete named Walter Johnson just had to be solid and substantial, and names like Christy Mathewson, Hans Wagner and Tris Speaker had to be unforgettable. William T. Tilden 2d, remains the name which any dramatist would have applied to a tennis player, just as there could be no more virile name for a fighter than Jack Dempsey, or Bat Nelson.

Anyway, Pericles has a tough row to hoe—and we hope he doesn't wind up doing just that.

Layden Acts After Scene at Playoff

By Charles Dunkley

Chicago, Jan. 4 (AP).—Elmer Layden, commissioner of the National Football League, today dug into the bank rolls of George Preston Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins, and Ralph Brizzolara, general manager of the Chicago Bears, to the extent of $1000.

Layden, in one of his most drastic disciplinary acts since he became commissioner in 1941, fined Marshall and Brizzolara $500 apiece for their altercation before 34,000 fans at the National Pro Championship playoff game in Wrigley Field here December 26.

Marshall Near Bench

The incident grew out of Brizzolara's efforts to remove Marshall forcibly from the field near the Bears' bench. Marshall, snuggly wrapped in a big raccoon coat, was suddenly discovered near the bench in the closing minutes of the first half, as he was making his way towards the Redskins' dressing room entrance. Brizzolara, with the help of Jack Goldie, Bear trainer, and police, escorted the Redskin president to a passage beneath the stands.

Layden termed the action of Marshall and Brizzolara "not reciprocal of the public confidence in the National Football League" and asserted they did not "promote the interest of professional football."

Layden Sets League Meeting

Commissioner Layden also set January 12 and 13 as the dates for the League's annual winter meeting to be held at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago. The meeting, originally scheduled for December 20 and 21, usually is called to draft graduating collegians and is usually held at the time of the championship game. A playoff in the Eastern Division, however, forced a delay in the title contest and also a change in plans for the meeting.

The player draft will not be held at the meeting a week hence, Layden said, but, like last year, will be held later, probably at the annual business meeting in the spring.

Marshall Demands League Hearing

"I don't know what I've done to be fined $500," Redskin President George Marshall said yesterday, when asked for comment on the $500 fine Pro Grid Commissioner Elmer Layden levied on Marshall and Ralph Brizzolara, acting president of the Chicago Bears, for their altercation on the sidelines during the championship playoff game in Chicago.

LAYDEN

"It was through no fault of mine that the incident occurred. I violated no rule of the league. The decision to fine the Washington Club, or me, on the part of Commissioner Layden is unfair and unjust, and I protested it," Marshall said.

Here's Marshall's Story

Marshall's story is thus: "I had to cross the field to get to our dressing room. I was put so far away from the field by the Chicago Bear management it took me several minutes to reach the sidelines by the only available exit from my box, one which led to the field back of the Bears' bench. I reached the sidelines about a minute before the half ended. At that time several passes fell incomplete and the time passed slowly. Suddenly Brizzolara rushed up and started yelling and acting stupidly. A clubhouse boy then came over and said, 'I'm under orders and have to eject you from the field. I'd have to do it if I was working for you. I haven't seen Brizzolara since.'"

Marshall said "I received a letter two days ago from Layden and had no idea the matter would be made public, although it makes no difference to me. However, I demand a hearing before Layden, the league executive committee, or both."

Marshall said he was within his rights in being on the field, and the fact he was near the Bear bench was an accident. "Every club owner except one sat on his team's bench in our home games, and I have access to the field according to the league constitution. I always wish to protect the interests of the Washington team."

Matter Still Not Clear

According to Marshall, Layden's letter was not clear as to whether he should pay the fine personally, or whether the Redskins should pay it.

In reference to the fine being the heaviest since Layden was elected commisisoner, Marshall said the New York Giants had been fined $500 for a questionable infraction of the rules last season, but the fine was rescinded.

Brizzolara could not be reached for comment in Chicago. His duties as acting president of the Chicago Bears, in the absence of Lieut. Comdr. George Halas, are in addition to his business interests.

Marshall will demand an audience with Layden on the fine at the league meeting, January 12-13 in Chicago. Marshall and Sid Carroll, general manager, will represent the 'Skins at the business meeting at which time the personnel of the league for 1944 will be determined and a rough schedule drafted. Marshall again will bid for additional home games for the Redskins.

Arthur Murray Wins Thrilling Tropical Race

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 4 (AP).—In the most thrilling finish of the meeting, which saw the first three horses hitting the wire noses apart, Arthur Murray captured the featured South Miami Purse before 5154 fans here this afternoon. Flying the silks of Mrs. W. W. Adams, whose husband owns the Boston Bruins hockey team, Arthur Murray covered a mile and 70 yards of a dried-out track in 1:42 flat, giving his table and Jockey Hubert Trent a double on the card.

Mrs. R. Feinberg's Eric Knight, which had raced effectively in recent sprints, held on gamely to beat Isidore Bieber's Moon Maiden for the place. The victor, fourth in his only other start this winter and frequently close up at Rockingham Park before that, returned $9.80 for $2.

It was a tough day for form players. They selected Legation—a good second in the Orange Bowl Handicap—and that fellow, after racing well up early, faded to fourth, thus keeping the talent whitewashed for seven events decided.

Eric Knight led the ultimate victor by a very slight margin to the stretch, then the Adams' representative poked his nose in front and kept it there in the spirited battle to the wire. Moon Maiden, a factor from the start, closed fastest of all, barely missing second money while disposing of Legation with ease.

Muchy, $15.78, won the last race by a half length under Johnny Adams. Roman Flag was second and Blitzkrieg third.

Creelman or Banks Fights Angott Here

Sammy Angott, recognized as world's lightweight boxing champion by the National Boxing Association, definitely will oppose the winner of Monday night's scheduled eight-round battle bringing together Billy Banks and Victor Creelman at Uline Arena. Such was the announcement forthcoming from Promoter Goldie Ahearn last night.

Ahearn announced that Angott has agreed to box Monday's winner her in late February, and will be brought in for such a bout regardless of the outcome of his stands against Lulu Costantino at Madison Square Garden Friday night and against Beau Jack in the Garden on January 26.

"One of the reasons Creelman agreed to come back in a return bout against Banks was because I promised him I would try and line up Angott for the winner," Ahearn said. "I feel certain that Monday night's winner will prove a good, tough opponent for Angott, or any other lightweight in the country."

Banks, who has snapped back into his best fighting form in recent bouts with Creelman and Willie Speary, last night declared before departing for a boxing exhibition at Fort Meade that he was supremely confident he would halt Creelman's winning streak at 30 bouts in a row Monday night.

Farman Undergoes Operation, And Will Play Football Again

Dick Farman, the Redskins' unanimous all-league guard who missed the last four league games and both playoffs with an undetermined injury, underwent a successful operation yesterday at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., and will play football again.

Dr. Robert E. Moran, Redskins' physician, received a report from the Mayo Clinic that a disc pressing against the nerve center of Farman's left leg had been removed and that the pressure had been relieved.

DICK FARMAN

Farman was hurt in the Detroit game here November 14 and for several weeks was unable to straighten up. He was under constant treatment but found little relief. He did not play after the Detroit game although he made all the trips and in Lafayette, Ind., before the championship playoff game donned a uniform and took part in a light workout.

Farman reported to Rochester after the Chicago Bear playoff game and has been under observation, at the Redskins' expense, since that time. He will remain at the clinic for a week or two and then return to his Saco, Mont., home. According to Moran he was advised yesterday that Farman definitely would be able to return to football next year.

Farman was named to every all-league team although he played only half the schedule. The Redskin line play dropped off from the time of his injury.

Calvin Griffith Is Elected Vice President of Nats

Calvin Griffith, 32-year-old nephew of Clark Griffith, was elected vice president of the Washington Baseball Club yesterday at the annual meeting of the stockholders at Griffith Stadium.

In a rare shuffling of club officers, which have seen few changes since Clark Griffith assumed the presidency in 1920, George M. Richardson, predecessor of Calvin Griffith in the vice presidency, was elected treasurer of the club. Edward B. Eynon was voted the dual office of secretary and assistant treasurer.

GRIFFITH

Clark Griffith was reelected to the presidency of the club for the twenty-fourth consecutive season.

In his report to the stockholders, Griffith announced that the club had enjoyed its most profitable season in 10 years, both from a revenue and home attendance standpoint. The Nats drew 583,000 home attendance in 1943 and were second only to the Detroit Tigers in that respect.

The stockholders announced that a dividend was being declared for the first time in several years, although a moderate one. It is a $1 a share dividend, which amounts to a distribution of $20,000, and, according to Griffith, represents only a share of the year's profits.

"A much larger sum in profits is being withheld at this time to be spent for the purchase of ball players," said Griffith.

Cal Served on Nat Farms

Calvin Griffith, one of the more youthful executives of a big league club, has been groomed for the vice presidency by several years of service in the Nats' farm system. After leaving George Washington University, where he starred both as a pitcher and a catcher, young Griffith moved to Chattanooga as manager and president of the Nats' farm team there. In 1938 he was transferred to the Nats' Charlotte farm as president and manager, and led the team to the Piedmont League pennant in his first year.

For the past two seasons he has been assistant secretary of the Nats in charge of concessions at Griffith Stadium.

Williams and Hubert To Clash at Turner's

Holman Williams, Chicago middleweight, and Tee Hubert, the District middleweight king, have been signed for a 10-round headliner next Tuesday night, January 11, at Turner's Arena.

G. W. High Bows, 29-22, To Eastern

The Eastern Rambler quint defeated George Washington High of Alexandria, 29-22, yesterday, but the issue was in doubt until the end of the third quarter, for the Presidents took an early lead and held on to it until that point.

Leading by two points at the end of the first quarter, George Washington climbed to a 3-point lead by the half, held the Ramblers nip and tuck through most of the third quarter until the scoring combination of Sam Dellinger and Bob Lamon took over to put Eastern ahead, 24-18. Joe Hensley was top scorer for the Presidents.

Eastern opens its interhigh season at Tech gym at 8:45 p. m. Saturday against Wilson, which suffered defeat at the hands of George Washington in a pre-Christmas game. Several Wilson players were out of the line-up at that time, however.

Touchdown Club Honors 4 Grid Stars

Four of the Nation's greatest football stars of 1943 yesterday had accepted invitations to be present to receive handsome trophies to be awarded them at the annual dinner of the Touchdown Club of Washington at the Hotel Statler next Tuesday night.

Executive Secretary James S. K. Magner last night announced that Tuesday's Touchdown dinner will be a closed affair, all available plates having been disposed of weeks ago.

Baugh Gets Signal Honor

Baugh will be the first professional player to be so honored. The Touchdown Club voted to donate a trophy to this branch of football activity several weeks ago. Incidentally, Baugh and Todd were team-mates with the Redskins before Todd entered the armed service.

Bertelli was making football history at Notre Dame this season before he was called into the service, and was forced to miss his team's last three games. Following Bertelli's departure from South Bend, the Irish were desperately extended by Iowa Pre-Flight in a great game, and lost their final start of the season to Great Lakes. There are many who believe that Notre Dame might have gone on to an undefeated, untied season had Bertelli remained to the end.

Coolidge Five Wins From Saints, 34-21

The Coolidge High basketball team seemed to be off to a good start in emulating the Colts of the gridiron season yesterday as they swept over the St. John's Prep quint, 34-21, for their third victory and an unblemished record.

Scoring 17 points in the first half, Coolidge held the Johnnies to a meager eight by accurate defensive play. Paddy Rhodes of St. John's and George Lafferty of the Colts led in the scoring, with eight points each.

The Coolidge victory over St. John's may well be considered a key to the opener of the interhigh competition at Tech gym Friday night, when the Colts take on Anacostia, for St. John's recently defeated the Flatsmen, 49-31. In its two previous games this season Coolidge beat Montgomery-Blair High, 33-27 and took Bullis Prep by a 40-34 score.

$50,000 in Awards... for Post-War Employment Plans

QUESTION: What are the Pabst Awards?

ANSWER: The Pabst Awards are an important series of prizes, totaling $50,000, for Post-War Employment Plans. Announcement of the Awards was made on December 1, 1943, and competition for the Awards is now open.

QUESTION: Why have the Pabst Awards been established?

ANSWER: The war is not yet won. Great battles, great dangers—perhaps great disappointments—still lie ahead on the hard and costly path to Victory. But with every passing day, the certainty of Victory increases. It is not too early to prepare for Peace—to face and solve the new problems that Peace itself will bring.

Of these problems, one of the first and greatest is JOBS.

Upon the answer to this vital post-war problem depends the future of our nation, and of all its citizens.

QUESTION: What is the purpose of the Pabst Awards?

ANSWER: To bring about universal recognition of the critical importance of the Post-War Employment question; to stimulate intelligent planning for the lives and futures of Americans everywhere; to foster and encourage constructive thinking for the fullest measure of employment after Victory.

Through these Awards, we hope to provoke mature and responsible discussion, and thus to develop and assemble practical and workable plans and ideas for meeting one of the greatest problems of the Peace to come... and to make these plans and ideas available, when they are needed, for the benefit of all Americans.

QUESTION: Who will make the Awards?

CLARENCE DYKSTRA
President, University of Wisconsin

WESLEY C. MITCHELL
Professor of Economics, Columbia University

BEARDSLEY RUML
Treasurer, R. H. Macy & Company, and Chairman, Federal Reserve Bank of New York

A. F. WHITNEY
President, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen

Members of the faculty of the Economics Department of Columbia University will serve as consultants to the judges, and will also assist the judges in supervising preliminary judging to select those entries which merit consideration by the Board of Judges.

QUESTION: What Awards will be made?

ANSWER:

SEVENTEEN AWARDS TOTALING $50,000 WILL BE MADE AS FOLLOWS

A First Award of $25,000
(Purchase Price) in United States War Bonds

A Second Award of $10,000
(Purchase Price) in United States War Bonds

Fifteen Additional Awards of $1,000
(Purchase Price) each in United States War Bonds

Winners will have the privilege of naming the particular series of United States War Bonds they prefer.

QUESTION: On what basis will the Awards be made?

ANSWER: The Awards will be made solely on the basis of the value of the plans presented... not on literary merit. Manuscripts submitted should present a workable and practical basis for the solution of the broad problems of Post-War Employment in America. The winning entries will be those which, in the opinion of the Board of Judges, offer the best and most constructive plans for Post-War Employment in the United States.

QUESTION: Who sponsors the Awards?

ANSWER: The Pabst Post-War Employment Awards have been established and financed by the Pabst Brewing Company of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and Peoria, Illinois, in observance of the 100th Anniversary* of the founding of its business. However, the judging of entries and all related matters will be completely independent of the Pabst Brewing Company or any of its officers or stockholders.

The administrative details of the competition will be handled by the Pabst Post-War Employment Awards Committee under the supervision of George V. Denny, Jr., Moderator, America's Town Meeting of the Air, with offices at 551 Fifth Ave., New York.

 Since 1844, the Pabst Breweries have grown and prospered under the American democratic system. We are grateful for our success and would like to do our share in searching out solutions to the problems which will face our nation; so that all of us may continue to live in a prosperous, peaceful, active and advancing country.*

QUESTION: When does the Competition close?

ANSWER: February 7, 1944.

QUESTION: To what practical use will the winning Plans be put?

ANSWER: At the close of the competition, copies of the winning plans will be turned over to responsible officials of the Government. In addition, copies will be made available for study by any other agency—public or private—which concerns itself with the problems of Post-War Employment; and may be published, in booklet or other form, for distribution to the public.

RULES

1. Every citizen of the United States of America including members of the Armed Forces at home and abroad is eligible to compete for the Awards, except officers or employees of Pabst Brewing Company or its subsidiaries, or its advertising agency, instructors, administrators or students in the Economics Department of Columbia University. Likewise, no member of the immediate family of any of these groups is eligible.

2. Each entrant shall submit his own plan for stimulating Post-War Employment in the United States. Each plan shall be stated in not to exceed 2,000 words. The plan may be supported by such additional material as the entrant may decide to furnish.

3. All manuscripts must be written in English on one side of the paper, preferably by typewriter. Illegible entries will be given no consideration. Each manuscript must bear the entrant's signature, his home address, and normal occupation. However, during the final judging, entries will be identified by numbers only.

If an entry is submitted jointly by more than one person, the signature, home address and normal occupation of each of the persons must be given, and if such manuscript wins a prize the amount of the prize will be divided equally among those persons.

4. By submitting an entry in this competition, the entrant agrees to be bound by all of the provisions of these rules.

All manuscripts and plans submitted shall become the property of Pabst Brewing Company, which shall have the right to publish the manuscript and author's name, but not to the exclusion of the author. No manuscripts will be returned.

5. Entries will be judged on the basis of the practical contribution they offer to Post-War Employment in the United States and not on literary merit.

6. Prizes, as listed elsewhere in this announcement, will be awarded as determined by the Board of Judges. The decisions of a majority of the judges shall constitute and be the decisions of the Board of Judges and shall be final, conclusive and binding upon all persons entering the competition.

If the Board of Judges shall determine that two entries are tied for a particular award, each of the two entries will receive the full amount of that award. In the event of the death, resignation, inability or refusal to act of any one or more of the judges, the remaining judges may but shall not be required to select a successor or successors to fill any such vacancy.

7. Entries, to be eligible for consideration, must be mailed and postmarked not later than midnight, February 7, 1944, and, regardless of postmark, must be received not later than March 27, 1944. Neither Pabst Brewing Company nor anyone connected with the competition will be responsible for entries delayed, damaged, undelivered or lost. Address and mail entries to:

Be sure to affix adequate postage.

Announcement of winners will be made on April 12, 1944, or as soon thereafter as judging can be completed.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Quartermaster Depot Must Quit D. C. Jan. 31

The Washington Quartermaster Depot must be moved down to Cameron, Va., about seven miles south of Alexandria, by January 31.

Civil Service is now trying to recruit Alexandrians and Fairfax County residents to replace employes who won't be able to make the long trip . . . A China legal section has been set up within the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce to study China's commercial codes and to assist American business firms doing business in China. Chief of the unit is Iziaslav V. Slepak, who practiced law in China for nine years. Assisting him will be Dr. Meredith P. Gilpatrick, a legal economist who formerly was with Foreign Economic Administration.

The FBI recently got this hot tip from a Boston woman who identified herself as "K": "I first noticed him when he stopped to pat his head in front of a chewing gum machine. He was wearing a black toupee, but I could see white hair underneath. He also wore a small goatee almost white with gray mixed in. He had on a khaki jacket with reddish brown buttons and a lot of overcasting on the upper part of cuffs and on pockets. Had three rings on one hand. I had some hard work to get the details as he seemed very keen. He wore a light blue shirt and a tie with red and light gray diagonal stripes. Perhaps he was just an innocent professor, but I suspected him on account of the goatee and the haircut." "K" spied her victim near Harvard College.

FATHER DRAFT: Federal agency deferment committees have been told that Government fathers who are over 30 and who have had at least five years experience will be given "serious" consideration for deferment if they are in essential war jobs. However, War Manpower's central deferment commitee, whose chairman is hard-working Robert Barnett, made it clear that it would not set up any arbitrary standards that fathers must meet before they can be considered for deferment. WMC Chairman Paul McNutt is dead set against any standards, but the fact remains that in reviewing cases the central committee will give preference to older fathers who have had years of experience. The 30 and 5 plan is merely a guide.

Moreover, Federal agencies have been told they must ask immediate 60-day deferments for all essential fathers who are facing induction. These requests must go directly to local draft boards. In addition, the central committee has asked that it be given a list of all other fathers whose deferment is expected to be asked by the agencies. The committee hopes to get this information by the 15th, but several of the larger agencies say it'll be impossible to meet this deadline. It will order inductions or else grant longer deferments in all cases. Meantime, the central committee will attempt to learn the pattern local boards use in deferring fathers and it hopes to use it as a guide in handling Government father deferments in line with the President's order that all fathers must be treated equally.

SIGN AT QUARTERMASTER: Treat our stenographers kindly as they're harder to get than experts . . . Senate Civil Service Committee hopes to hold hearings this week on the Aiken bill which would allow Federal workers to retire on full annuities after 30 years' service regardless of age. The chances are good that the Seante will okay it, but Representative Ramspeck has served notice he'll battle it in the House . . . John H. Larrabee, head engineer of Navy's Hydrographic Office, has retired after 43 years of Federal service . . . Charles Miner of Quartermaster's public relations office, will go to Chungking, China, to edit an American language newspaper.

FIRING FEDERAL WORKERS: It's simple, despite the widespread contrary impression.' An employe whose appointment to a Civil Service job is specifically limited to a year or less may be fired simply by being told by the appointing officer that his services are no longer needed. No other reason needs to be given. This same general rule applies to persons appointed to non-Civil Service positions and to any Civil Service appointee during his trial period. To fire an incompetent employe who has a Civil Service status and who has served his probationary period also is simple and easy under Civil Service rules.

All that's required by Civil Service is that the employe to be fired be notified in writing of the charges against him and that he be given a reasonable time for replying in writing to the charges. No trial or hearing is required. Civil Service has no power whatever to require an official to reinstate an incompetent employe, and furthermore, courts have refused repeatedly to take jurisdiction over the removal of Federal workers. The cold truth is that Federal workers have little or no protection against supervisors who have the power to pin an "incompetent" charge against them.

Jail Probe Group Given Wide Power

The three-man committee of private citizens appointed yesterday to investigate "maintenance and operation" of the District Jail will have no limits placed on its activities and "may give us particular fits," Chairman of the Board of Public Welfare Frederick W. McReynolds said last night.

Rover

"We feel the people here are entitled to the best jail in the country and we want them to be satisfied we are giving it to them," McReynolds said. He said the board and former District Commissioner; Leo. A. Rover, former U. S. Attorney for the District, and Bruce Baird, president of National Savings & Trust Co. The committee was named following a request by the Board of Public Welfare. McReynolds said the board chose a committee whose members were prominent enough for their report to carry weight in the community.

Baird

Charges of favoritism shown by jail administrators to Orman Ewing, an inmate, were made last month by another inmate, Frank S. Fowler; and Commissioner Guy Mason instructed Acting Director of Penal Institutions Ray Huff to investigate. Since Huff, along with others, was named by Fowler in a suit charging an assault upon Fowler by Ewing, McReynolds said Huff was put in the position of investigating himself.

Formal appointment notifications were put in the mail yesterday, and the appointees declined comment pending receipt of them. They are being directed to meet with the Board of Public Welfare, select a chairman and proceed to work at once. Rover said he assumed the nature of the investigation would be broader than charges connected with this particular squabble."

Reichelderfer

McReynolds said the three would be allowed access to all records and to interview prisoners or "anyone they want."

Appointment Urged

Jail inmate Frank S. Fowler asked District Court yesterday to compel the Board of Public Welfare to appoint a general superintendent of the local penal institutions.

Fowler, now awaiting trial for forgery and false pretenses, also is suing Ray L. Huff, acting director of penal institutions, for $666.66, charging a fellow inmate was given special privileges and allowed to assault him.

The suit, filed by Attorney James J. Laughlin, states that under existing law the Board of Public Welfare is required to appoint a superintendent but that in failing to discharge their duty the board has created a condition where laxity, corruption, favoritism and discrimination exist at District Jail.

Fowler says that since Huff is being sued for maladministration and also is conducting an investigation of District Jail, he is in the position of investigating himself.

Fowler says he "knows no rule of law ancient, medieval, or modern, that authorizes an accused to investigate his own misconduct."

City News in Brief

2 Accused of Selling Coupons For 10,000 Gallons of Gasoline

Caught selling coupons good for almost 10,000 gallons of gasoline for about $295, two Negro employes of the D. C. Refuse Department last night were charged with sale and illegal possession of gas-ration coupons. Police termed the arrests the first in a series to break up a ring said to be operating through the Eastern area.

The men, who gave their names as James C. McDaniels, 23, of 1385 Florida ave. ne., and Major Witchell, 34, of 1244 Union st. sw., recently offered the OPA stamps for sale to Samuel W. Kessler, owner of a filling station at 3279 M st. nw., police said.

Kessler had notified police and a trap was set for yesterday. When the two men arrived in District Government trucks, Kessler gave them four marked $5 bills, saying that he would have to go to a bank and get a check cashed. That was the tipoff for police, who had arrived earlier. Precinct Detective Joseph Loughrin, Leslie I. Mason, OPA investigator, and a New York regional officer investigator, took the men in custody. Seventy-eight sheets of stamps, worth 9430 gallons in gas, were involved.

Police had been checking reports that A, B and C coupons of recent issue were being sold in the northwest area for $1 per 32 gallons.

The Autogyro Co. of America of Philadelphia asked to be declared legal owner of the patent and wants set aside a ruling of the Commissioner of Patents, who awarded priorities on the patent to John W. Dyer and David Kay of Kay Gyroplanes, Ltd. of Edinburgh, Scotland.

The annual report of the criminal division of Municipal Court released yesterday showed the effects of wartime legislation on tribunals here, with increases in violations of OPA regulations and the sanitary code and a decrease in traffic court business.

A report compiled by Wilmer S. Schantz, chief financial clerk of the criminal division, shows that during the past year, fines paid in the U. S. branch of the court amounted to $47,170, compared to $37,653 during the previous year, a gain of about 25 per cent.

In the District branch, a 15 per cent gain was noted in a total of $367,471 in fines. Health violations, which ran as high as 45 cases a week in August but have been declining steadily since, covered most of the increases.

Motorman Cleared in 2d Traffic Death

James M. Royster, 39, of 1423 Sheridan st. nw., a Capital Transit motorman for the past seven months, was exonerated of guilt in his second traffic death within a month after a coroner's jury yesterday gave a verdict of accidental death in the case of Dr. Emily E. Bateman, 93, of 2305 Washington Circle nw.

In another inquest, James E. Dougherty, 36, of 124 Quincy pl. ne. was ordered held for action of the Grand Jury under the Negligent Homicide Act in the death of Harry B. Halley, 67, prominent Washington bowler, who resided at 2 S st. ne.

Halley was a passenger with Dougherty when the latter's car collided with a parked auto in the 3900 block of Benning rd ne., November 18. Admitted to Gallinger Hospital for treatment, Halley left before being released and died the following day at his home.

Dr. Bateman died at Gallinger Hospital Sunday from injuries received when she was struck by a streetcar operated by Royster in the 2000 block of 14th st. nw., November 25. Last month Royster was exonerated in the death of Anthony Mares, 83, of 4017 14th st. nw., who was struck by a streetcar in the 4000 block of 14th st. nw, December 16.

The vehicle continued along the street at about 10 miles an hour and collidided with a taxicab stopped for a red light at 15th and H sts. nw. Two More Die Of Meningitis; No New Cases

Two more deaths from meningitis were reported yesterday, but Health Department authorities said no new cases had been listed this year and that there was no cause for alarm.

The first deaths of 1944 were Mattie Mathis, 46, Negro, of 2703 Stanton rd. se., who died of pneumonia and meningitis at Gallinger Hospital Saturday, and Albert Fultz, 60, of 4806 Clark st. se., who died at Gallinger Sunday.

Dr. James G. Cumming, head of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, pointed out, however, that meningitis cases flourish during January, February and March. Cases in the District tripled last year, compared with 1942. A total of 159 cases and 25 deaths was reported last year.

He said the influenza epidemic had almost disappeared here.

As for the rabies epidemic, which broke out last May, Dr. Cumming said cases were decreasing, but that health officials would request renewal of muzzling and quarantine restrictions put into effect in October by the District Commissioners and scheduled to run out this month. He added the rabies epidemic may continue for "several months or several years."

Doctor Indicted On Draft Evasion Plot Charges

Dr. James S. Hens, 52-year-old Baltimore psychiatrist whom FBI agents arrested in November through the cooperation of Ferdinand Nauheim of 3916 Military rd. nw. was indicted by a Baltimore Federal grand jury yesterday on charges of "counselling, aiding and abetting" a selectee to evade the draft, the Associated Press reported.

Dr. Hens, who served at a Baltimore induction center, has been at liberty under $10,000 bond. The indictment charges him with seeking to obtain $2500 from Nauheim for the purpose of helping him to get into 4-F by feigning a psychoneurotic condition.

Nauheim told U. S. Commissioner James K. Cullen at a preliminary hearing that he notified the Federal Bureau of Investigation as soon as Dr. Hens had proposed to him ways to evade Army induction. It was charged, at that time, that the physician accepted a package from Nauheim which he believed to contain part payment for his "advice" and was then caught by FBI agents.

Homes-For-All Plan Urged Before Forum

Warning that inadequate housing for Negro families may result in "racial minority ghettos" in Washington, Mrs. Pauline R. Coggs, executive secretary of the Urban League, yesterday asked a housing forum under the auspices of the League for Women Shoppers to support a program of adequate homes for "all sections of the population.

At the same time, the Emergency Committee on Housing condemned a plan recently proposed by a private building agency to substitute "rent certificates for low cost public housing. It would inflict the stigma of "relief clients" particularly on Negro families in the low-income group, it was asserted.

Chief blocks to Negro housing in Washington, Mrs. Coggs told the forum, which was attended by representatives of leading civic, church and Government housing agencies, arise from attempts to limit them to "established" Negro communities.

But these communities are shrinking steadily under inroads by new housing developments for white tenants, she declared. Problems of site selection and local prejudice have also aggravated the situation, while urban redevelopment plans tend to ignore provisions for colored families evicted for slum clearance.

In public housing, such as that done by the National Capital Housing Authority, she saw the only realistic solution of the problem. NCHA must be continued, she declared, since private building has failed or is "unwilling" to supply homes for Negroes of any income range.

Meanwhile, rezoning demands by two Southeast citizens' associations, involving proposed sites for Negro housing projects, will be presented at a hearing before the District Zone Commission at 10 a. m. today in the District Building.

Restrictions against building multi-family dwellings on sites at Alabama ave. and 15th st., se., and at Benning rd. and 46th st., se., will be asked by spokesmen for the Congress Heights and Bradbury Heights Citizens Associations.

The proposed restrictions would limit building to row houses, raising land costs above those allowing for rent schedules approved by WPB and FHA, according to Smith & Gottlieb, building firm which secured priorities for the projects and purchased the two sites. Loss to the builders, as well as to underhoused Negro families, would be great, it was asserted.

Protests against the suggested zoning revisions will be presented before the commission by leading civic groups concerned with the acute housing shortage here.

Civic Federation Asks NCHA's Life Be Extended

Extension of the life of the National Capital Housing Authority was requested by the Federation of Civic Associations last night following a report of its housing committee made by Richard R. Atkinson.

A resolution submitted by the committee asked that appropriations sufficient to carry on the work of the Housing Authority be granted. An amendment asking for change of administrative personnel of the Housing Authority was carried by a vote of 18 to 16.

Other resolutions adopted asked for a reorganization of the authority so that Negro membership would be required thereon, for modification of rules so that persons might be rehoused in their own communities, and for no abandonment of sites for rehousing without public hearings.

School Board Eases Ban on Fraternities

By Anne Hagner

The unenforced ban on high school fraternities—in which the Board of Education shook a warning finger while students continued to belong—yesterday made first strides toward being lifted as the rules committee decided to adopt a "laissez faire" policy.

The rescinding of all former regulations concerning secret societies and substitution of a policy of nonrecognition will be submitted to a full board meeting today, but under its rules cannot be voted upon for two weeks.

Barred From Buildings

Under the proposed terms, the committee made it clear the board would not bother fraternities as long as fraternities did not bother the board by taking part in school life.

The insertion, proposed by Dr. J. G. Gannon, states:

"Fraternities, sororities and similar organizations are not officially recognized, and are not permitted to hold meetings in the school buildings. Because they are not open to every student in the school, they will take no part in the life or activities of the school."

"The present rules," Dr. Gannon declared, "are inconsistent, difficult of enforcement and at variance with the practices in public schools of other cities comparable with Washington, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Richmond.

School Honors Periled

"Our rules provide for suspension or expulsion of students who are guilty of persistent disobedience. Belonging to unauthorized fraternities is persistent disobedience, but the board has modified this penalty to deprive the offending student of school honors outside of those provided for scholarship. This is inconsistent.

"Fraternities and sororities hold their meetings in the homes of students, usually after dinner in the evenings when the students are under parental supervision. The schools, by their own rules, have no supervision at these times, which makes another inconsistency plus an affront to the parents of the students."

Davis School Issue

In answer to an objection from another member that fraternities held sway in election of school offices, Dr. Gannon said: "Call it Alpha, Omega, or the New Deal, elections are run by parties. I think that, as a board, we should not know there are fraternities."

F. P. Randolph, vice president of the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association, appeared before the buildings and grounds committee to urge the construction of a permanent building to replace the Davis School, in which he said 262 pupils are enrolled. This matter also will be considered by the board today.

DGS Election Names Kerman As President

Paul D. Kerman, 2409 Franklin st. ne., a grocer for 23 years, has been elected president of District Grocery Stores, Inc., to succeed Isaac Jacobson, who held the post since 1930.

The election took place in the Jewish Community Center Monday night but the ballot count was not completed until early yesterday. The group has 265 membres.

Other officers elected were: Herman Eig, first vice president; Martin Watman, secretary, and Joseph Muchnick, treasurer. Re-elected were Louis R. Fields, second vice president, and Louis Biskin, third vice president.

Chosen new members of the board of directors were Morris D. Burka, Samuel Fischer, Nathan L. Gildenhorn, Al Kaufman, Samuel Katz, William Liff, Murray Loeb, and Phillip Roth. Re-elected to the board were Frank Seidel, Louis Snider and Maurice Kay. The terms are for one year.

Use of Exercise In Treatment of Patients Urged

After the war civilians should take a tip from the Army Air Force and remember to treat "patients" as well as "disease" and other ailments in hospitals, Col. Howard Rusk told mmebers of the Women's National Press Club yesterday.

In Army hospitals exercises and duties for convalescents as well as training courses and special lectures help put sick men back to work sooner and in a healthier frame of mind, even if they must go back with a disability.

Colonel Rusk said exercises are started early, even if only a finger or toe can be moved, and patients work up to four to six hours of calisthenics before leaving.

As a result, scarlet fever patients go back to duty 9 days sooner than formerly; measles patients, a week sooner, and readmissions from upper respiratory diseases have been reduced as much as 25 per cent.

Fire Forces Two Out

Fire broke out last night in the two-story frame structures at 2610 and 2612 Pennsylvania ave. nw., forcing occupants to the street. No one was injured.

The fire was discovered by Frances Boltz, 19, who lives with her mother, Mrs. Nellie Beltz, 63, at the 2610 address. Jacob F. Blatz, father and husband, is in Georgetown Hospital, recovering from illness.

Stewart Thaden, son of Rose Anna Thaden, owner of the house at 2612, said the first warning of fire the Thaden family had was when the fire engines rolled up in front.

BARNABY By Crockett Johnson

The workout I'm taking in our "gym" every morning really is making me feel worlds better. Everybody ought to get some regular exercise nowadays . . .
Congressmen, too, Pop? . . .
Congressmen? Of course. Why not? . . . As a matter of fact, the congressional physician claims they're all overworked and don't get enough exercise . . . He also says they need a month's rest—
Huh?
CROCKETT JOHNSON
Mr. O'Malley! . . . The doctor in Congress said you need a whole month's vacation! . . .
A month off? And doctor's orders! Can't ignore THAT, can I, m'boy?
Be careful, O'Malley.

Married 23 Years, With Three Grown Children, Wife Has Finally Tired of Husband's Nagging; She Loves Him Very Much, but Thinks of Leaving

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is there a cure for a nagging husband? I have been married 23 years and have three grown children,—one of them a son now in the Navy. All my married life I've had to pinch pennies, although my husband has always made a fine salary. We own our own home and I've always done all my housework, including the laundry,—which never hurt me. I am 41, have a neat figure, wear a size 11 dress; and my hair hasn't a silver streak in it. I have always been very much in love with my husband, despite his sarcastic nagging. (He is 46.)

I had never had a vacation since I was married, until three years ago when my aunt,—who was like a mother to me,—had a stroke. Her daughter begged me to come to see her,—800 miles away. Well, after several arguments with my husband, I was allowed to go; and my daughter, then 19, took over the housework for me. Shortly after I reached my aunt's home, she got better and her two sons (one about my age, and the other a couple of years older) decided to take me out and show me the town. I went to my first night club and danced and had two gin fizzes. Also, they took me to several good shows. It was so much fun, after having been tied down for 20 years.

Well, the two weeks passed rapidly and my husband drove down for me. When I left, I kissed my two cousins goodby and thanked them for the nice time they had shown me. My husband quarreled all the way home, 800 miles; and I was a rag when we got back. Ever since then, whenever a disagreement arises, he says: "Why don't you go to your hillbilly cousins? They would buy you drinks, and kiss you and dance with you," etc. I can't see where I did anything wrong; and I have never asked him to take me to a night club. In fact, I've only seen two movies in the last three years. And I don't drink or smoke; not that I think it is wrong, but he would.

My children say I've stood enough and that I should leave him. But I hesitate on account of my sailor son. I want him to have a home to come to when he has leave. Also, I haven't worked out since I married. And I know my husband would not pay alimony, nor would he divide the home. Can you give me any advice on how to cure his nagging habit?

F. A.

Man's Sour Puss Hides His Real Love for Wife

DEAR F. A.: You say you have always been very much in love with your husband, despite his sarcastic nagging. That is good news. Because, judging by the fit of jealousy he threw, and never recovered from, after seeing you kiss your cousins goodby,—and hearing about the good time they had given you,—he is just as much in love with you as you are with him; and maybe more. If it came to a test, I imagine he would be far more "lost" without your companionship than you would be without his.

Unless you are suffering acute deprivation at his hands,—such as not having a cent to call your own, to spend as you please; or being denied freedom of action to come and go, without special "leave" from him,—it would be foolish, I believe, to abandon the marriage just to escape his chronic nagging and jealous jibes at your "hillbilly cousins." I believe a wiser thing to do is to learn how to bear with him,—in the sense of cultivating a spiritual knack of refusing, deep in your heart, to take his tantrum thrusts and arguments seriously.

Bring Light Touch To Duel of Words

IF YOU WERE to adopt a policy of offering silent thanksgiving for his good points,—which he must have, or you would not continue to love him very much after 23 years' marriage,—and close your ears to his waspish harangues, only occasionally sassing back at him, and then on a note of placid derision, there is a chance you might take much (and maybe all of the worst) of the friction out of your time-worn relationship. To illustrate, harking back to your blameless holiday spree with your two amiable cousins: Instead of letting your husband bulldoze you into a worriedly defensive reaction, so that you were periodically re-hashing the episode in lame attempts to persuade him and yourself that you did nothing wrong there, you might better have said, at once and merrily: "Why Hiram, you old fool. Don't tell me you're jealous. Don't tell me you 'care,' after all these years!" And then let your retort rest there, except for some sidelong looks of secret amusement, in case he continued to bear down on the subject.

Since you are only 41, with the figure of a girl and the general appearance of being younger than your years; and since your children are grown and eager to see you assert independence of their father; and since business and industry are nowadays literally begging for competent women workers (to replace good men who have gone to war), you have the chance of a life time, right now, to get job experience plus special emergency training at worthwhile pay, in almost any field of employment you might care to enter. And by getting out of the house into salaried work, you would be developing double strength for dealing with your husband as necessity requires.

Wider Range of Interests Would Ease Wife's Nerves

ON THE ONE hand, daily contact with a variety of new interests and associations would bring you refreshment of mind and spirit, and thus enable you to see your home difficulties in wholesome perspective, for the tempests-in-a-teapot they probably are. And on the other hand, as you gain job-seasoning and confidence in your ability to hold your own in the business world, you will lose your timid, dependent fear of your husband's moods, and talk up to him as one adult to another; and thus automatically compel from him more respect than you can in your present bullied, clinging vine role.

Because you will know, and so will he, that if worst comes to worst, you can move on and shift for yourself; that you don't have to swallow his eternal nagging, in order to be sure of bed and board.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Many a mother thinks all of her troubles are over when she puts her baby on a bottle. The moment she knows how much food the baby is consuming she need never worry that he isn't getting enough to eat. Or, when he is obviously hungry, she can always provide more food!

However, there is more to successful bottle feeding than just the concoction of a good formula. There is still the feeding of this formula.

It is better, from various standpoints, to hold the baby when he is fed.

It is possible then to keep the bottle at an angle which allows for the nipple to be kept full of milk. This lessens the chances of the baby swallowing both air and milk and soon becoming so stuffed he cannot swallow the remainder of his formula.

Holding the baby allows him to enjoy the same sweet, warm, comforting relationship with the parent as is the lot of the nursing baby. It is a relationship without which the baby is infinitely poorer.

When the mother holds the bottle and the nipple goes flat, as it does when exhausted of air, she can immediately remedy the difficulty. The poor baby on his own can only gnaw and suck on the flat object without getting a drop of sustenance from it.

And, as important as any factor is the opportunity the mother has to note when baby is slowing down—even though the bottle is still half full—and to pick up baby and let him belch up that air bubble.

There are no reasons except those of time-saving, for propping the bottle in baby's bed and leaving him to his own devices. In that case the baby manages until he falls asleep, often with the nipple in his mouth. That is one of those bad habits the undesirability of which does not show up until the baby is older and is being weaned to a cup. Then his reluctance to lie down without a bottle provides a real handicap to his acceptance of this new and more grownup way of drinking.

Chase Household Dirt, Banish Kitchen Odors With Efficient Aids

By Martha Ellyn

There's usually a good solution to every household problem. Heaven knows, we are all looking for dependable ways to lighten our chores. Sometimes it is a bit confusing to learn of the many aids available in the stores. Which one to try? Well, the powder rug cleaner told about in this column recently proved to be the answer to many a homemaker's rug problems, so we have tracked down and tried out two more household items that we are recommending to you.

Today, a suggestion is given for turning that back-breaking, nail-splitting chore of linoleum mopping into a more appealing job. Although such a cleaning agent is gentle in action, it yields powerful results. Get some of the linoleum cleaner offered at local linoleum shops. Dissolve the liquid in water and spread it over the dirty linoleum. No harsh scrubbing and rub-a-dubbing is necessary. Allow the solution to stand on the linoleum for several minutes, then mop up with clear water and you will have a spic-and-span floor.

Cross ventilation is a condition that many of the smaller size apartments have to get along without. When a room of guests get to smoking, sometimes the air becomes "thick." When cooking is done in small size apartments and there is no exhaust fan, the odors will permeate the entire apartment.

However, tantalizing they may seem to the hungry, the mingling of them with smoke doesn't add pleasantness to living quarters. But you can let home folks and guests smoke to their heart's content, and let the spluttering onions splutter, and know that you can freshen the air with a deodorizer which cleanses the air and brings a lovely fragrance. The medium for this accomplishment is to buy a bottle of the deodorizer and follow the simple process. Remove the cap from bottle, grasp the loop and pull up a wick. The stronger you want the odor the further you pull out the wick—1 to 4 inches. You do not light the wick, it works in a silent, dependable manner.

Call us at National 4200, Extension 324, and we will tell you where you can get the deodorizer and the linoleum cleaner.

Scales Haven't a Chance Against Feminine Wiles

By Ida Jean Kain

(This is the second article in a special series by Ida Jean Kain to help you get in trim. If you weigh too much, you can lose the excess; if too little, you can bring your pounds up to par. And, either way, you can improve your health on her menus.)

Why a woman will quibble about a couple of pounds when she weighs upwards of 20 pounds too much is one of life's minor mysteries. One lady wrote in to ask, quite seriously, which weight she should go by, morning or night. In the morning she weighed a mere 173 pounds, but toward nightfall she weighed 175 pounds.

Foibles on the Scales

Since she happened to be 40 pounds overweight, the two pounds didn't make much difference one way or the other. But it is all right to go by the morning weight for normal.

Another woman makes it a rule never to weigh herself when she has the slightest reason to suspect that the scales may be up. And one opportunist has discovered that the scales register slightly lower at one particular spot on the bathroom floor. She always maneuvers around until she finds that spot. Then, there are some women who keep the indicator turned down below zero—just to make things look brighter!

Despite all the cartoons, you scarcely ever see an overweight lady coming right out in the open to get weighed. Probably that is because she likes to strip off everything that might possibly make her weight a little higher—coat, hat, shoes, bracelets, etc.

In a class by themselves are the fat ladies who know they are overweight but would rather not know how much. Years go by without their stepping on the scales. And, at the other extreme, are the ones who weigh several times a day to see if there is any chnage.

Once a week is often enough to weigh when you are on a diet, and once every two weeks after your weight is normal. What you want is a trend, not the daily fluctuation of the scales.

Weight Depends on Build

How much you should weigh depends on your build. If you inherited a medium frame, you may start with 105 pounds for the first five feet of your height; with a stocky frame, 110 pounds, and with a slight frame, 100 pounds for the first five feet. For each inch above five feet, add five pounds. Or, for each inch under, subtract five pounds. There is one exception, the woman with the very stocky frame who may add 10 per cent to the total and still be normal weight.

It is not intended that you should add weight with birthdays. Stop at the weight that is normal for you at 25. Up to then, you can be on the chubby side and after that, streamlined.

Psychology May Aid Donor But Blood Count Is Safe Rule

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

BLOOD DONORS fall into two psychological groups. One is the enthusiastic boiler-with-patriotism who wants to give and give any time, as often as possible.

The other is the timorous, apprehensive mouse who wonders if the blood will ever be normal again, and promises to return next year if the doctor will approve. To be fair there is a large third group who take advice and return for redonation at the approved time.

The mathematics of blood regeneration are quite thoroughly worked out and no one need be kept in the dark about them. They serve as a guide to all groups of donors.

The average adult has about 5000 to 6000 cubic centimeters (5 or 6 quarts) of blood in the body. This is constantly being destroyed. Old cells which have outlived their usefulness are broken up either in the spleen or liver or both and replaced by regenerated new blood from the bone marrow.

It is estimated that under ordinary conditions of normal life you lose 100 c. c. of blood every 24 hours, which is replaced by the bone marrow.

Iron Replenished by Food

This means that every 24 hours you lose 100 mg. of iron which has to be made up partly from the food—eggs, green vegetables, meat, nuts. About 85 per cent of the iron lost is reclaimed by the body economy and used to ironize new cells.

Of course, when any abnormal loss occurs the bone marrow speeds up production, but in the case of a blood donation loss this takes time.

The blood donor loses approximately 500 c. c. of blood and 5500 milligrams of iron at one fell sweep. And none of this iron can be made up from the internal economy of reclaiming such as is done when the red cells are destroyed in the body. It all has to be made up from food or deliberate iron ingestion.

Measuring Regeneration

The best and easiest method of measuring the regeneration of blood is to estimate the hemoglobin—the iron containing coloring matter of the blood which makes it red. Following a donation the average drop in hemoglobin is 2 1-3 grams.

It requires 50 days to restore this to normal. This period can be speeded up by taking easily assimilable iron preparations by mouth—Blaud's pills or tincture of iron, two or three times a day.

But a safe rule is to allow an interval of three months between blood donations, and the hemoglobin should be estimated beforehand, as it is at all good blood banks. No donor is accepted with a hemoglobin less than 80 per cent.

As to permanent injury from repeated blood transfusions. Before medical students were inducted into the Army and Navy many of them helped pay their way through school by giving blood for transfusions.

I remember one boy who gave a blood donation as often as once a month. His complexion got to be like dough. Although he knew it was too often, he was very ambitious and needed the money and scoffed at the danger. He must have been right because he came to visit me lately, a captain in the Medical Corps; and ruddy and healthy as could be.

Edmundo do Valle, and the Assistant Naval Attache, Lieut. Comdr. Paulo Antonio Bardy. Returning to Brazil for reasons of administration is A. C. Named as new Assistant Naval Attache is Lieut. Comdr. Antonio Cezar de Andrade, who has brought Mme. Cezar de Andrade with him.

Senor and Mme. Alencastro are planning a trip to New York the end of the week to stay almost a week, saying "goodby" to that city. They will leave the end of January.

Sunday evening a group from the Brazilian Embassy staff and their wives paid a surprise visit to the Alencastros, and before the evening was over had presented Senhor Alencastro with a farewell gift—a silver plate—which also turned out to be a birthday gift as well.

As plans are now, Commander and Mme. do Valle expect to leave January 12 for Miami and on January 16 will take a plane for Brazil.

Mrs. Chipman Studies New Art Method

"In those days I was an individual. Now I'm just a wife." It was Mrs. Norris Chipman, the former Miss Fanny Bunand-Sevastos, speaking with a laugh, when asked what she was doing about her painting. In those days—half a dozen or more years ago—Miss Bunand-Sevastos was developing a remarkable talent and a great gift. She has progressed in strides, in spite of household duties and her career as a wife.

Just now she is studying a new method of painting, with an old medium, under the tutelage of that famous artist, Jacques Maroger, who lives in Baltimore. Mrs. Chipman goes twice a week for lessons and is fascinated with what she learns. It was M. Maroger who discovered the medium of the old masters, which calls for an entirely different technique than that of modern painting. When she feels she has mastered the art, Mrs. Chipman hopes some day she will give an exhibition.

Little more than a year ago the artist was living in Cairo, where Mr. Chipman was serving as second secretary of our legation there. Mr. Chipman had been forced to return to this country earlier because of serious illness, leaving Mrs. Chipman to make the trip by plane across the Atlantic.

Lieut. Luberda On Service Leave Weds Miss King

Like many other men on leave after service in far-flung battle areas, Lieut. (j.g.) William Stanley Luberda, USN, who recently returne fron the South Pacific, is now on a honeymoon. He and his bride, the former Miss Jean King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Littlefield King, are now on their way to San Francisco, where the bridegroom will report for duty the middle of this month.

The wedding took place a few days ago in St. Charles' Catholic Church, with the Rev. Dixon R. Beattie officiating at a candlelight service. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her aunt's wedding gown of heirloom lace, fashioned with a long train. Her veil fell from a lace cap and she carried her mother's prayer book with a single orchid. Miss June Reamy was maid of honor, wearing a frock of old rose taffeta. Everett Woodward was best man.

Following the ceremony there was a reception in the Georgetown home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Ordway King, and shortly afterward the couple left on their wedding trip.

Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, Successor to Sikorski, Joins Capital Guest List

By Martha Rhyne

"This is a man who comes from the country." In Poland you would thus describe Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, premier of the Polish government in exile. For this stocky, strongly built blond and somewhat bald leader of the Peasant Party typifies the small-holding farmers of his country.

No entertainment or lavish reception will feature his visit to Washington in the middle of this month, for his trip is for business only. There isn't much gayety in the heart of a man, only 43, who not only carries the burden of a conquered country, but is weighted with the knowledge that his wife, the same age, is held as a hostage in the Oswiecim concentration camp in Poland, one of the most horrible of Nazi horrors.

His Wife and Son Interned by Himmler

News of his wife's internment and possible execution reached the former deputy prime minister in the administration of the late Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski last November. At the personal order of Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler, both his wife and son were interned, but news has come through the underground that his son has escaped from a German camp. Rumors are that he is even now with his father. The premier, as minister of the interior in Sikorski's cabinet, was in direct touch with the underground, a liaison between the government in exile and the underground and it was from this source that he learned the news of his wife and son.

In September, 1939, fighting with the ill-fated Polish army, he crossed the Hungarian border and was there interned. He escaped to the Polish government in exile in Paris and was vice president of the Polish National Council, a parliamentary body of which the late Ignace Paderewski was president. After the fall of France he went to England and joined the Sikorski government.

Will Confer With Roosevelt and Hull

It is the Polish Peasants Party, now active as the underground, which has held together in Poland for many years, being the most powerful party in prewar Poland.

Although plans are not definite, it is likely that Prime Minister Mikolajczyk will stay at the Polish Embassy during his short stay, at which time he will talk with President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull on postwar problems and plans.

Newest Assignment for General Sultan Hailed in Capital Circles: Widely Remembered Here as Popular and Able Member of Officialdom

THERE'S AN ANCIENT and honorable saying in the Army, "If you're in trouble, call for the engineers."

Mrs. Sultan

So a "call" made by Lieut. Gen. Joseph L. Stilwell for a deputy commander of the United States Army forces in the China, Burma, India area, has resulted in his getting one of the most efficient engineers in the entire Army—Maj. Gen. Daniel I. Sultan, whose appointment to the newly created post is being widely applauded in Capital circles.

Engineer Commissioner of the District from 1934 to 1938, General Sultan (then a lieutenant colonel), his wife and their three pretty daughters—Devin, Sheila and Linda—were highly popular members of Washington officialdom then.

A vivacious woman with a keen sense of humor, Mrs. Sultan once told me she still marveled over her marriage. Her husband, she explained, was "of all things—a Southerner, a son of a Democrat and a Presbyterian.

"And I," she went on, "was a Yankee, a Republican and a Catholic!"

But they both, she added, had a deep affection for Washington. "We love every tree and stone in it. It's home to all of us."

THE FORMER Miss Florence Braden, daughter of a retired Army officer and Indian fighter, Mrs. Sultan was widely known in Washington before she met the man who was to be her husband. Under the aegis of Mrs. Armistead Davis, daughter-in-law of onetime Vice Presidential Candidate Henry G. Davis, she made her bow to society here. Later, that same year, she first laid eyes on the star center of the Army football team. "He was walking off the football field at West Point," she said, "and in all my life I never saw such a bespattered individual."

It was not until nine years later, when he returned to West Point as an instructor, that she married him. And it was several years after that when he began to be headlined as the Army ace who led the little band of sweating engineers into the miasmic jungles of Central American to bring peace to troubled Nicaragua.

Mrs. Sultan was always amused when Washingtonians pointed out the resemblance between her husband and the controversial Hugh Johnson. "They may be alike as to heavy jowls," she once said, "but certainly not as to adjectives."

HERE AND THERE: From Stockholm comes word that Count Willem van Rechteren Limpurg, who was Counselor of the Netherlands Embassy here until April, 1943, has been named Minister to Sweden. He went from here to Stockholm to serve as Charge d'Affaires, and his recent promotion has been hailed with satisfaction by the Swedish press as indicating the strengthening of ties between Sweden and the Netherlands. "This is a typical United Nation's answer to the German attempt to make the Netherlanders Germans by force," says a recent editorial in a liberal Stockholm daily.

The same newspaper, incidentally, carries a lengthy warning to the Swedish people, beginning as follows: "The final stage of the war has not yet begun . . . and may not, for a long, long time. Now is no time to be optimistic." That advice might be of value to overly optimistic Washingtonians who are declaring on all sides that the war will be over before the end of 1944.

"STALIN STOLE the show," said a young Army officer who was among those present at the historic Teheran conference, and who was giving me a few highlights about it at dinner the other evening. "Stalin sat silent, stolid; smiled infrequently; looked supremely unselfconscious and as much 'at home' as if he attended a meeting like that every day of his life. He's a great actor, but he achieves his effects by underacting . . . every minute of the time.

FOUR BIRTHDAY cakes were on display at dinner last evening when Senator Carter Glass celebrated his eighty-sixth natal day with his wife and three friends—Mr. and Mrs. Rixey Smith of Washington and Sam Kaplan of New York. Futhermore, Mrs. Glass spent most of yesterday opening boxes of flowers and answering telephone calls from friends.

Senator Glass

"Mr. Glass never looked better in his life. He's feeling fine," she said proudly when inquiries were made about him. He's having a wonderful time . . . and probably never realized before that he had so many friends. I asked if any of the four birthday cakes had 86 candles thereon. "Oh, no; no indeed," she said. "We don't mention numbers on birthdays any more."

Miss Hoffman, Sculptor, a Visitor Here

Malvina Hoffman, noted sculptress, who makes her home in New York, is in town for a few days, the guest of Mrs. Anne Archbold at her home on Reservoir rd. Last evening Mrs. Archbold invited a small group of the artists' friends in to meet her again.

Winner of the medal for "eminent achievement" by the American Woman's Association in New York a few years ago, Miss Hoffman is a frequent visitor to Washington. A number of her sculptures were exhibited under the aegis of the National Geographic Society in 1936, and a permanent collection is on view at the Field Museum in Chicago. For this commission Miss Hoffman spent five years creating a series of life-size bronzes depicting the races of man.

Tall, with silvery hair, Miss Hoffman also possesses an exceptional sense of humor. She has traveled widely and the results of those travels were a series of sculptures that made her world famous and "Heads and Tales" one of the most readable adventure books ever written by an artist.

Miss Hoffman was accompanied on several of her expeditions by her husband, Samuel B. Grimson, artist and scientist. She would invade the most far-reaching corners of the earth, making friends with half-civilized natives and persuading them to pose for her. Then, working furiously she would mold rough models in clay before her models became frightened and ran away.

Anne Farley Makes Debut in New York

Classmates at Wellesley College, boys in the uniforms of the Army and Navy, will be among guests at the reception this afternoon given by former Postmaster General James A. Farley and Mrs. Farley when they present their daughter, Miss Anne Farley, to society in New York. In the group of guests also will be a large number of friends of the former Cabinet member and his wife. The fete will take place at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Washington remembers the debutante as an engaging little girl in the pigtail stage, possessing a large share of her famous father's personality. Her classmates at Miss Hewitt's Classes from which she was graduated in June, called her "cute." President of her class, she delivered the senior speech at the commencement exercises and acquitted herself with glory.

Miss Farley is following in her sister Betty's footsteps at Wellesley. The debutante's elder sister is of an equally scholastic turn of mind and was graduated from that college at the age of 19.

Myron Weiss Here For Visit After Mission Abroad

In town for a brief official visit is Myron Weiss of New York, former senior editor of a national magazine.

Mr. Weiss, now connected in a liaison capacity between industry and government, returned not long ago from a trip to Portugal, where he went as representative of Marshall Field's Committee for the Care of European Children.

The expedition was for the purpose of evacuating 500 children from the occupied countries. But upon arrival in Portugal, it was discovered that the Nazis had already closed the borders and it was possible to evacuate only 35.

According to Mr. Weiss, however, the American Legation and consular staff in Lisbon were not only a hard working crew but had earned the respect of the Portuguese government as well as other governments represented there.

Almost a hundred guests gathered in the apartment of Miss Culbertson's parents, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, at 2101 Connecticut ave.

The honoree is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Victor Kimball. Miss Culbertson will return today to her studies at Connecticut College.

Mrs. Zoya Dickins, Lothrop Stoddard Are Married

With no formal announcement of their engagement preceding, the marriage of Mrs. Zoya Dickins and Lothrop Stoddard of Washington took place at noon yesterday in Philadelphia. After a honeymoon in New York they will return to Washington to make their home at 2911 P st.

The bride, who is Russian-born, is the former wife of Capt. Randolph Dickins, USA, retired. Since her divorce she has spent much of her time in Florida. The new Mrs. Stoddard's daughter, Zoya, is also a recent bride, having been married on December 6 in Los Angeles to Lieut. Hilliard Eve Miller, jr. USMC. They are now living in Los Angeles. Mrs. Miller was a frequent visitor to her grandmother, Mrs. Albert W. Dickins, and her aunt, Miss Virginia Dickins, both of Washington.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 4 (AP).—The wheat and rye markets were unsettled today, opening easier and then firming immediately on scattered buying that carried prices at times more than a cent over previous closes and in the case of rye to new seasonal highs. Oats followed other grains, although holding with a narrower range.

Expectation of hard wheat ceilings, which were announced after the close of trade, led to evening up operations in wheat and prices reacted somewhat from the day's highs to close unchanged to ¾ higher than the previous finish. May 1.69¾@.169½, July 1.68⅝@1.68¼; rye finished ⅜ to ¾ up, May 1.28⅞@1.28¾; oats, ¼ off to ⅛ up, May 78⅛, and barley ½ off to ½ higher, May 1.22¼.

'Ice-Capades of 1944' Plans a Bond Matinee

By Marjorie Kelly.

Word comes from WRC's Captain Knode and Publicist Al Sherman that WRC and the Variety Club of Washington will cosponsor a Fourth War Loan Bond Matinee of "Ice-Capades of 1944" to be held at Uline Arena Saturday, January 29.

Under the chairmanship of Showman Carter Barron of Loew's a committee has been set up to handle the details of this patriotic venture. One bond of any denomination will be the admission for each seat. Each purchaser of a war bond of any denomination (that's up to your own conscience!) is entitled to one seat. After next Monday (the 10th) bonds will be on sale at the Earle, Capitol, Keith's and Station WRC for admissions to the matinee.

Meanwhile, a downtown ticket office for the "Ice-Capades" is being opened this morning at the Fairway Sporting Goods Co., 1328 G st. Ticket sales begin at 10 a. m.

This year's "Ice-Capades" show numbers 152 in its cast—108 of whom are women. The Ice-Ca-Pets and Ice-Cadets are back with the show, with fewer Cadets and more Ca-Pets than ever, due to the draft. Old favorites returning will include Orrin Markhus and Irma Thomas, Phil Taylor, Joe Jackson jr., Al Surette, Chuckie Stein, Donna Atwood, Mar-Yan McCarthy, Robert Dench and Rosemary Stewart and Trixie.

Workshop Film Series Continues

The Washington Workshop's series of film classics, which was begun in December on a trial basis, is being continued, because the December series was fully subscribed so promptly after the first announcement.

The January series begins this Sunday at 8 p. m. with Rudolph Valentino's "Monsieur Beaucaire." On January 16 the Russian classic "Chapayev" will be shown; on January 23 a comedy program with W. C. Fields in "The Barber Shop" and the Marx Brothers in "Duck Soup;" and on January 30 Rene Clair's "A Nous la Liberte."

Admission to the series is open to membership; the series costs $1 for January. Memberships are available at the Workshop, which you can call evenings, Adams 9765.

Prospects for the week to come at downtown movie houses: At Loew's Capitol on Thursday, "True to Life" with Mary Martin, Dick Powell and Franchot Tone, along with a "Good Neighbor Revue" on stage features Carlos Nolina's orchestra; and at the Palace, Alice Faye in "The Gang's All Here." On Friday RKO-Keith's will open the much-discussed "Flesh and Fantasy," in which appear a long list of screen stars including Charles Boyer, Barbara Stanwyck, Edward G. Robinson, Dame May Whitty, and a galaxy more.

The Earle Theater will hold over "Destination Tokyo;" "Thousands Cheer" goes to Loew's Columbia for a second F st. week, and "Northern Pursuit" goes to the Metropolitan.

As for the Little Theater, this department bet manager Abe Tolkins when "Jeannie" opened two months ago it would run eight weeks at least. He'll have to pay!

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

IT DIDN'T LEAK OUT at the time, but two brotherhood leaders staged a terrific row during one phase of the rail negotiations and J. J. Pelley, representing the railroad operators, had to pacify them.

It happened after A. F. Whitney, head of the trainmen, accepted Roosevelt's offer to act as arbiter. In the presence of the other brotherhood chiefs and the railroad executives, Dave Robertson launched a stream of abuse at Whitney, accusing him of trying to curry favor with the President.

Whitney shot back that it would not only hurt the Nation but be suicide for the brotherhoods to carry their strike threat too far in wartime.

Labor Colonels

THE WAR DEPARTMENT didn't announce it, but Lieut. Gen. B. B. Somervell offered colonel's commissions to both Whitney and Alvanley Johnston of the locomotive engineers, who accepted the President's arbitration and were appointed labor advisers to the Army. Somervell suggested that they become colonels. They promptly vetoed the idea, however.

"I've got a son who has been a colonel in the Army for a good many years," replied Whitney. "He got his eagles the hard way and I wouldn't insult him by accepting a colonelcy on a silver platter."

Locomotive Engineer Johnston echoed the same sentiments. They didn't tell General Somervell, however, that if they accepted commissions in the Army, they knew they would be taking orders from him, not from their unions.

Inside fact is that the President had not planned to take over the railroads on December 27. He was going to wait until December 28 or 29, just before the strike deadline. There was also very definite information that all the unions would call off the strike threat at the last minute.

However, the President decided to act drastically and one day earlier for this reason: Its effect on the striking steel workers, on other labor, on Congress and on the country generally.

He himself was getting tired of strike threats and he had information that the country was tired, too. The country was getting the impression that he was being run by labor, and he decided that this was a good chance to prove the contrary.

General Somervell had been ordered a few days before to draw up plans for taking over the railroads. He and his staff spent 96 hours on it, produced a thick book of plans a little earlier than expected. So the President moved in.

The "Hopkins Letter"

THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT has unearthed all sorts of ways to punish the forger of the "Harry Hopkins Letter" to Umphrey Lee, president of Southern Methodist University, predicting Willkie would get the Republican presidential nomination—if it was a forgery.

There is a five-year imprisonment for theft of Government property, including the theft of White House stationery. There is also a penalty for using a facsimile of Government seals and stationery; also a penalty for engraving a personal supply of White House stationery with the intention of using it fraudulently.

Furthermore, it is more and more evident that Harry Hopkins wants a thorough investigation—even of the typing of the letter he is supposed to have written to the Texas university president. Typewriter identification is an exact science. There is no guesswork about it. And if the letter was written on any typewriter in Hopkins' office, this can be ascertained definitely.

There seems no doubt from Hopkins' talks with FBI that he never saw the letter before. Only trouble now is that book author Nelson Sparks, who first referred to the letter in his book "One Man—Wendell Willkie," now is getting cold feet and says he won't produce it without a legal summons.

Note: Several months ago this column was offered the "Hopkins letter," but refused to publish it in the belief that not even Hopkins, naive as he may be politically, would write such a letter on White House stationery. The suggestion that Hopkins was also trying to promote a candidate against Senator Tom Connally three years before an election seemed absurd.

Priorities Save Condemned Man

PVT. JOSEPH McAVOY of Brooklyn, sentenced to die for killing a Nebraska schoolgirl, thought he would never see the New Year, but he is still alive.

Reason is that the War Production Board refused materials to repair Nebraska's electric chair. Later, Nebraska found some repair materials which could be borrowed locally, but had to be returned. This meant taking apart the electric chair, repairing it, and then taking it apart again to return the borrowed materials.

This was too much. So Nebraska, which hasn't had a capital punishment case for years, postponed the execution. It now looks as if Private McAvoy might be granted a new trial. The sentence may be revised to "life" instead of death.

Washington Comment—WPB's priorities system may have driven many a man to thought of suicide, but this is the first time it has saved a life.

Notes, Anecdotes From Broadway

New York, Jan. 4.

A servant at the home of Hamilton Fish Armstrong brought to her employer an overcoat which a dinner guest had forgotten. It was a worn coat, with a department store label, but no other identifying marks . . . The servant went through the pockets, and brought forth these items: a Western Union envelope, empty; a match book with no matches in it, a crumpled cigarette package, with two broken cigarettes in it; a newspaper headline, torn in half . . . Armstrong studied this strange assortment of items. "Oh yes," was his correct guess. "Call Wendell Willkie's house, in the morning, and tell Mr. Willkie that he left his overcoat here."

FIORELLO LAGUARDIA

Mayor LaGuardia took his two children and their friends to Radio City Music Hall to see the movie, "Madame Curie." On the way home the youngsters kept asking Fiorello a series of questions about radium, and he could answer none of them. The youngsters' curiosity intrigued the mayor . . . And that's why he has directed that a two-day Radium Exhibit, for children, be given at Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn and Bellevue Hospital in Manhattan.

Capt. George Oppenheimer, the screen writer who went to India to become Lord Mountbatten's aide, stopped at an airport near Cairo. There, in the dusk, he saw a tall man he thought was Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, an old friend of his. "Hey, Averell! Averell!" Capt. Oppenheimer shouted after the retreating figure . . . Another officer stepped up to Oppenheimer and said: "Sir,, I heard you shouting 'Averell' after that man. His name is not 'Averell.' That man is Joel McCrea . . . The officer then was startled by seeing Capt. Oppenheimer run after the retreating figure, this time calling after another old friend: "Hey, Joel! Joel;"

Captain Oppenheimer, incidentally, arrived in New Delhi after flying in every conceivable type of mail-plane. He reported to Mountbatten, who asked: "How was the trip over?" . . . "I've flown in so many mail-planes," the captain replied, "I am practially fourth-class matter."

Somewhere in the China-Burma-India sector, an American officer who had a cold wanted to buy some soft tissue paper to use instead of a handkerchief. He found a shop where this paper was being sold, and asked the price; "30 rupees each," the owner told him . . . The officer complained that the price was outrageous, and started to leave. "But you can't do without this soft paper," the owner reminded him . . . "Oh yes I can," the officer replied. "I'll use rupees instead."

Alfred Hitchcock's next picture, which will be produced by David Selznick, is the movie adaptation of the mystery-thriller, "The House of Dick Edwards." Hitchcock himself bought the movie rights from the author, and sold the rights to Selznick . . . He promised the producer that he would be ready to begin this new picture as soon as he returns from England. To expedite this job, Hitchcock had some filmwriters ready in London to start working with him on the script. Then, after all these preparations were made and the deal set, Hitchcock entered the plane for England, settled back in his seat, and began to read "The House of Dr. Edwards."

Howard Lindsay, who is being besieged constantly with plays submitted by new authors, was wondering about the proper way of rejecting them. "Fred Thompson had the best rejection method," Lindsay decided. "Thompson would return the manuscript with a note reading: 'My dear Mr. Jones. I have read your play. Oh, my dear Mr. Jones!—Yrs, Fred Thompson.'"

The New York Film Critics this week selected Paul Lukas' performance in "Watch on the Rhine" as the best in 1943. Lukas probably will win the Academy Award for this performance. But he almost never got to play the part . . . Lukas created the role in the Broadway production of Lillian Hellman's play. He came to New York, however, for another role in the play—that of the villain. But Herman Shumlin cast him as the hero, and gave the villain's role to George Coulouris . . . Shumlin produced and directed the play and the film. An announcement first was made that Paul Henried would play in the movie version. "Now even if Shumlin wants me for a movie," Lukas vowed, "I won't do it. I'll bet you I won't." . . . I bet him. He paid.

The Air Force show, "Winged Victory," will be performed at the White House, without scenery, when the President returns from his trip. Special units of the cast, incidentally, will entertain the WAVES at Hunter College this week. . . . When Lieut. Comdr. Jack Dempsey entered the 18 Club, Roy Sedley slapped him on the back and sat at his table. Dempsey was surprised at this effusive greeting. "Until a few days ago, when I got my discharge," explained Sedley, former storekeeper, 3d class, Coast Guard, "I wasn't allowed to do this." . . . Moss Hart and Lieut. Col. William Wyler may work on the "Winged Victory" screen play in London.

On December 24 James Waterman Wise visited the Turkish Ambassador in Washington. The Ambassador served him Turkish coffee and Turkish cigarettes while they discussed some Moslem-Jewish problems . . . "Thank you very much," said Wise, when the discussion was over . . . "A Merry Christmas to you," said the Ambassador, a Moslem . . . "And a Merry Christmas to you," said Rabbi Wise's son.

An Oscar for Lassie?

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 4.—Harry Cohn's asking price for Alexander Knox, who's playing Woodrow Wilson, is very modest. It's only $50,000. The holiday season got Harry. . . . Garbo isn't making "Lena Storme" at R-K-O. In fact, she's not making a picture there at all. I knew she wouldn't. She made too many requests. It's well known that Garbo never has made money for her producers in America. Her big draw has always been Europe. . . . Eric Hatch, who had much to do with "My Man Godfrey" and "Topper," has sold "Home Is the Sailor," which will run a current magazine, to Bill Goetz. David Lewis will produce it. . . . Brynie Foy is getting praise from all quarters for his "Guadalcanal Diary,' and deservedly so. . . . Hey! How about giving Lassie an award for the performance in "Lassie Come Home"?

GRETA GARBO

Lost Out Again

Hollywood's too slow on the upbeat. It had a chance to buy into the Blue network. Hollywood's so busy making pictures it doesn't realize that television will be right around the corner when war's ended. . . . Nice having Boris Karloff back again. Some smart producer some day is going to realize that Boris is a fine actor, and let him do something besides a horror picture. . . . Dorothy Comingore waited for her suspension at R-K-O after making "Citizen Kane." Now plays opposite John Loder and Bill Bendix in "The Hairy Ape."

Marking Time

I wonder if that sudden dash of Delmar Daves by plane to Washington had anything to do with the "Hollywood Canteen" picture. I have a hunch it did. I know Warner's won't take the refusal of Hollywood to cooperate on this lying down. The Screen Actors guild turned it down. Jimmy Cagney is president of that. It's well known that Cagney and Warners have been rowing for a long time. There's more to this than meets the eye, and I have a hunch it will all come out in the wash. . . . Walter Pidgeon didn't wear his first screen beard in "Madame Curie." Eighteen years ago he was bearded in "Miss Nobody," which starred Anna Q. Nilsson and Louise Fazenda.

Should Get What They Want

Fans, in spite of the war, like their stars glamorous. At a recent opening Hedy Lamarr got the biggest hand, and was she done up!—in a long gown afire with sequins, over that a luscious mink coat. And as her husband, John Loder, passed me, he whispered, "And I didn't pay for either of them." It always amuses me to see stars under contract to other studios refusing to speak over the microphone at an opening. Only those who think they're important skip it. The really big ones are gracious—and why not? It's part of a public appearance. And wouldn't they resent it if they were able to sneak into a theater unnoticed? Boy, that would take down their ego to zero.

They Can Hope, Can't They

Bill Girard, producer of "Ladies in Washington," has been asked to stress the glamour of the WACs', WAVES' and SPARS' uniforms, so they'll trot out all their finery, hoping it will help recruiting. . . . Trudy Marshall, who played in "The Sullivans," is testing for Benny Goodman's musical. . . . Marjorie Reynolds dyeing again—her blonde hair goes red for "Bring On the Girls." It's in color.

Family Life

Mrs. Don Ameche cooks, scrubs, and cleans for the family and four visiting relatives. She cleaned a batch of 25 wild ducks the other day and still takes time out to be with Don when he's doing "What's New?" Somebody asked me who the ageless girl of our town was. I'll nominate Maureen O'Sullivan. She's changed less than any girl here. You can't believe she's an old married woman with two children. She has the same modesty as when she first arrived from Ireland, and oh, how refreshing! . . . David Rose brought word from London that besides Irving Berlin's show, which stops traffic, they like old tunes and stories, such as "Hello, Frisco" and "Coney Island." They can think back to their good old times and join in with the singing. "So Proudly We Hail," a fine picture, didn't go. They've seen too much suffering over there . . . An ensign writes from Honolulu that he's just finished reading "Here's Suds in Your Eyes." Thinks it would be great for either Helen Broderick, Beulah Bondi, Billie Burke, or Emma Dunn. In fact, he cast the whole picture . . . Marjorie Weaver's mother was badly scalded and cut when a coffee pot broke in her hand.

Ringside Table
—With Mary Harris

SUCCESS IS WRITTEN all over the new Trade Winds. From its incredible white palms to its fabulous tropical drinks (one is the "Vicious Virgin"), this bistro has "that certain something." There's a little dance floor for stepping to Jerry Rodis' music. The show, headed by Sonny King, who looks like an athlete and sings like a Romeo, rolls on through the night with never a lull.

Eddie O'Hearn, his piano and orchestra, will move into the Carlton's Congo Room come Saturday, succeeding Harold Nagel's band which has graced the spot since its August opening.

AN ALL VAUDEVILLE SHOW is on at the Casino Royal. Singing emcee Jimmy Kane heads the line-up. Other stars are Virginia Stevens, tapstress; the Flying Hamiltons, skaters; dancers Tinker and Lynn. Baseball fans will like to know that young Tinker is the son of Joe Tinker, famed shortstop of the old Chicago Cubs.

FACES AROUND PLACES: Senator Alben Barkley holding what looked like a midnight conference with Henry J. Kaiser in the new Latin Quarter . . . Anita Louise of the movies enjoying roast turkey at Olmsted's. She was done up in a chartreuse crocheted hat with matching frock . . . J. J. Shubert and his son, Capt. Johnny Shubert, in the Mayflower Lounge with Johnny's bride, the former Helen Ecklund, dancer . . . Pretty WAVES are always parked in the Roosevelt's Victory Room of evenings. It seems that 250 WAVES are living in the Roosevelt and 75 more are expected . . . Sergt. Howard Seal, who used to be quite the man-about-town, recently parked in the Rainbow Room. He was hospitalized after servcie in Africa.

It's au 'voir to Carlos Molina at Del Rio tonight. With tomorrow for the fancy two-band opening of Bob Waples' 13-piece orchestra and Peter Rotunda's rhumba band.

WAVE SONG WRITER. Louise Pompeo, WAVE plane dispatcher at Anacostia, has written a pair of ditties pronounced plenty clever by Singer Anita Boyer who closed at El Patio recently and is now on tour with Glen Gray's Band.
